DIGEST OF CASES	Col. 1

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION.

THE object of this work is to furnish a comprehensive Index to the case law of India as laid down in the reported decisions of the High Courts and Privy Council, analogous to that already compiled of the statute law. It would perhaps be too much to hope that this object has been fully attained, but I can at least claim for it that it goes further towards success in that attainment than any previous work of the kind in India. I shall be satisfied with this attempt towards such an end if it be found in some degree useful to the Government in its legislation, to the judicial officers of Government, and last, but by no means least, to the members of all the branches of the profession to which I have the honour to belong.

The work contains the gist of the cases reported in 166 volumes of Reports extending over a period of fifty years,—viz., from 1836 to 1886. Besides the reports published in India, it contains the cases in Moore's Indian Appeals, without which, of course, no digest of Indian cases would be complete; and also such cases from the Law Reports, Indian Appeals, as are not reported in the Indian reports. The names of the reports are set out in the annexed list showing the periods over which they extend, the decisions of what Court they contain, and the abbreviations used for them in the references throughout the Digest.

With respect to a few of those volumes which have been reprinted, and in the later editions of which the paging is different from that in the original edition, I have given, wherever I could do so, both pagings. I think this difference of paging will be found with respect only to the first and second volumes of the Bombay Reports, the first volume of the N.-W. Provinces Reports, and the Agra Full Bench volume.

In some of the volumes—instances chiefly, however, confined to the Agra Reports—the paging is in some places manifestly incorrect, some pages having the same numbers. In these cases I have generally given the page which would have been correct had the paging been correctly continued.

In cases where it is not otherwise apparent that the case is a Privy Council or Full Bench decision, I have added in the reference the letters P. C. or F. B., as the case may be, to indicate this. It should be noticed that all the cases in the Supplemental Volume of the Bengal Law Reports are Full Bench cases. This is not the case, however, with the Full Bench volume of the Weekly Reporter, containing cases decided in 1862-63; the letters W. R., F. B., therefore merely represent the abbreviation of the name of that volume, and do not necessarily imply that the case to which they are appended is a Full Bench case. In fact, as all the Full Bench cases in that volume are reported elsewhere, cases to which the letters W. R., F. B., alone are appended are probably not Full Bench cases, though some of them may be decided by more than two Judges.

With the names of the cases I have had great difficulty,—a difficulty which, from the character of Indian names, is, it seems to me, almost impossible to overcome. The general rule I have followed has been to cut out from the commencement of the names all prefixes and titles. The principal of these are Shahzada, Shah, Maharajah, Maharani, Rajah, Rani, Nawab, Sahib, Sri, Sreemutty, Mussamat, Bibi, Thakoor, Syed, Moulvie, Moonshee, Mir, Mirza, Hadji, Sheikh, Baboo, Coomar, Cowar or Kooer, and perhaps a few others. I have omitted these as far as possible with the object in view not only of greater brevity in the names, but also in order that, in the Index of Cases, names that are similar may come together, and not as they sometimes do in an index of names, some with the prefix or title and under one letter, and the same name without it under another letter. I have made exceptions to this rule only in cases where the name is given in the following form :—“Maharajah of Vizianagram,” “Rajah of Shivagunga,” “Nawab Nazim of Bengal,” etc.

As to the spelling of the names, I found it hopeless to attempt any consistency, for the various volumes of reports go through all the possible variations in the manner of spelling any particular Indian name, and I came to the conclusion that it was best to spell the cases as they appear in the reports. Had I adhered in all cases to any one mode of spelling, the result would have been that any cases spelt in the report in a different way would probably never be found by looking in the Index of Cases, or, if discovered at all, only after much more expenditure of time and trouble than would be desirable; and such a method would, it seemed to me, lead in other ways to difficulty and confusion.

I at first intended to issue the work in not more than two volumes, but owing to the material having taken up more space in print than I imagined it would do, and it being desirable not to have the volumes of a bulk inconvenient for ready use and reference, it has been decided to issue it in five volumes to be published successively, and, if possible, within the present year. To each volume will be appended a table of the headings contained in it, and the last volume will contain a list of all the cases contained in the five volumes. The paging will be continuous throughout the work.

CALCUTTA;

PREFACE TO THE PRESENT EDITION.

SINCE the issue of the first Digest, which included the decisions of the High Courts and Privy Council down to 1886, the Author brought out three separate volumes containing the cases from 1887—1889, 1890—1893, and 1894—1897, respectively. The present edition is a consolidation of the previous Digests, with the addition of the rulings from 1898—1900 inclusive. Its bulk has consequently increased to a very considerable extent. A reference to the Table of Reports will show that the number of volumes of Reports digested is 241, as compared with 166 volumes digested in the first edition. The first four numbers of the Calcutta Weekly Notes have also been incorporated, as frequent reference is made to them in the Calcutta High Court. An idea of the increase of the size of this edition may be gained from a comparison of the number of volumes and columns of the two editions. Whereas the first Digest comprised five volumes including the Table of Cases, the present one is made up of five volumes of the Digest alone, and has a separate volume for the Table of Cases. In the former publication, Volume I contained the letters A—D and consisted of 1,562 columns; the present Volume I contains A—C only, and runs into 2,054 columns. In order to keep down the size of the volumes, the Author has been obliged in several places to omit lists of cases from cross references, thereby avoiding repetition, without, however, impairing the value of the work. The scheme and arrangement of the Digest remains the same, but Act XXVI of 1867, which was put under the Stamp Acts, has been transposed to Court Fees, and Bombay Act I of 1865 now appears under the heading “Bombay Survey and Settlement Act I of 1865.” Many separate minor headings have been brought under more general headings, and several sub-headings have been somewhat verbally altered. The vernacular terms and expressions which are scattered throughout the Reports are now printed in roman letters instead of italics, and some uniformity in their spelling has been observed.

2. ————— Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 317—Exposure of child—Facts constituting the offence defined—Child left in charge of a blind woman and deserted.—A woman who was the mother of an illegitimate child, aged at the time about six months, left the child in charge of a blind woman in whose company she was, saying that she was going to get food and would return shortly. She went away to another village, and did not return. Apparently she never intended to return. Upon these facts it was held by the High Court and the Privy Council

ABATEMENT OF RENT.

1. ————— Ground of Abatement—Causes beyond control—Act X of 1859, s. 18—The real meaning of s. 18, Act X of 1859, is that the grounds for which an abatement of rent may be claimed by a rayat must have resulted from causes beyond his control. MURDOCK ALI v. HARVEY [11 W. R., 291]

2. ————— Diluvion—Act X of 1859, s. 18 (Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 19)—Deduction in suit for arrears of rent—Rent of a talukh may be abated if a portion of the

4. ————— Diluvion—Right of occupancy.—A tenant, whether with or without a right of occupancy, is entitled to abatement of rent for land washed away unless precluded by the term of his kabuliat from claiming any abatement. ENAYUTOLAH v. ELAHEBUKSH

[W. R., 1864, Act X, 42]

5. ————— Cause of action.—When a diluvion takes place, a right of suit to obtain an abatement of jumma accrues from the time when the plaintiff is compelled to pay the rent named in his pottah without the allowance of the abatement claimed by him. HARRY v. ABDUL ALI W. R., 1864, Act X, 64

6. ————— Talukh created before 1790.—Quære.—Whether the proprietor of a talukh created before the Permanent Settlement can claim abatement of rent on the ground of diluvion. RAM CHURN BISSACK v. LUCAS [16 W. R., 279]

7. ————— Waiver of right to deduction.—In a suit for arrears of rent of land adjacent to a river where defendant claims deduction on account of diluvion, and it is found that the agreement under which he holds requires measurement to be made once in three years, no account being taken of accretion or decretion occurring within that period: if the tenant has waived his right of measurement and has held over, it must be presumed that he elects to continue to hold at the same jumma as before, and his claim to deduction cannot be allowed. KRISTO KINKUN PURAMANICK v. RAMDHUN CHETTANGIA

[24 W. R., 326]

8. ————— Kabuliat—Sale by tenant of his tenure—Suit against purchaser.—In a suit against the purchaser at an auction sale of a tenure under a kabuliat, by which it was agreed that the former tenant should not be entitled to abatement of rent on any ground and should be liable for interest at a particular rate for all arrears of rent, the defendant pleaded that as auction purchaser he was not bound by the terms of the kabuliat; that he was entitled to abatement on the ground of diluvion of portion of the demised lands, and only bound to pay interest at a reasonable rate upon arrears of rent. Held, that defendant was bound by the terms of the kabuliat entered into by his predecessor. ISHAN CHUNDER CHOWDHRY v. CHUNDER KANT ROY 13 C. L. R., 55

9. ————— Transfer of tenant, Right of, to abatement.—A tenant has a right to, and can claim an abatement of rent where the area of the land, the subject of his tenure, has been diminished by diluvion, and such right passes to a purchaser on a sale of the tenure. *Prosunno Moyee Dossee v. abatement of rent simply because the lands which he holds are rated higher than those of the same description and with similar advantages held by raiayats of the same class in the vicinity. Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 18, refers to an alteration of area owing to a portion of the land having gone away by diluvion or otherwise—not to some difference in the length of the measuring pole in use at different periods. *BABUN MUNDLE v. PERTAB CHUNDER BANERJEE v. OMUR SIRDAR [25 W. R., 89]

Affirmed in OMUR SIRDAR v. PERTAB CHUNDER BANERJEE 25 W. R., 212

11. ————— Damage to land by Cyclone—Right of under-tenant to get remission of rent.—A landlord receiving remission from Government on account of damage done to his estate by a cyclone is not on that account bound to allow a remission to his under-tenants, unless he received the former on the understanding or agreement that he would allow it in turn. GOLUCK CHUNDER MITTEE v. PARBUTTY CHURN DASS 15 W. R., 187

12. ————— Land less than stated in lease—Decree apportioning rent, reserved in a mokurari lease, to the land transferred—Lessee getting possession of less land than stated in lease—Act XI of 1859, s. 54—Right of lessee to abatement of rent.—A decree had determined that lands leased in mokurari to a lessee, with a fixed rent thereon, were less in extent than they were specified to be in the pottahs that comprised them, the lessors not having title to the whole; and the lessee had obtained possession of the less estate:—Held, that the lessee was entitled to abatement of the rent reserved. mehal, within which were the lands subject to the mokurari, such lands being shares of monzals therein, was afterwards sold for arrears, under Act XI of 1859. The purchaser at that sale was sued by the mokuraridar to make good her incumbrance under s. 54 of the Act. The lease was maintained by the decree that followed, but only as to part of the shares specified in the pottahs, and the lessee obtained possession of that part only. In this suit for mesne profits brought by the lessee against the purchaser's heir, who filed a cross suit against her for rent, it was held that, as the lessee had not proved that she, having had possession under the leases, had been dispossessed by the purchaser, there had not been an eviction in the proper sense of the word. But when, in her suit for possession, part only was decreed to her, and she was precluded by the result from getting a substantial part, her position was the same as if she had been evicted. She, therefore, had the same equity for an apportionment, as if she had been evicted. On the facts it was rightly found by the first Court that the leases were not taken with knowledge on the part of the lessee that the title was a doubtful one. IMAMBANDI BEGUM v. KAMLESWARI PERSHAD

13. ————— Error in measurement of land—Land found to be less than stated.—A lease providing for enhancement of the lands are found on measurement to exceed the quantity stated in the lease, does not necessarily give the right to abate if the lands are found to be less than that stated in the lease. RAM KANT CHOWDHRY v. BINDABUN CHUNDER GORE

[2 W. R., Act X, 71]

14. ————— Construction of pottah—Default of tenant.—Though a pottah provided for an abatement of defendant's rent if on measurement the land was found to be less than 145 bighas, yet it was held that if defendant came to be in possession of that less quantity by his own default, and not that of the lessor, the plaintiff patnidar sues for an abatement of rent, on the ground of fraud caused by the concealment from him of the existence of an intermediate tenure created by the zamindar. Cl 3, s. 23 of that Act, is wide enough to admit of such a suit being tried by the Revenue Courts. SHOKOOR ALI v. UMOLA AHALYA [8 W. R., 504]

19. ————— Denial of right to assess lands in tenure.—A suit in which the plaintiff alleges that rent was wrongly assessed on him for lands not covered by his pottah, and contends that in assessing his rent these lands should be included, is not in the nature of a suit for abatement of rent. OSHOY GOBIND CHOWDHRY v. 20. ————— Breach of Contract—Jurisdiction of Civil Court.—In a suit for damages by a lessee, where the plaint shows a distinct prayer for abatement of rent, and also sets forth as the main ground of the suit a fraudulent breach of contract by misrepresentation and refusal of deduction and refund stipulated for, so much of the claim as refers to abatement is, by cl. 3, s. 23, Act X of 1859, beyond the jurisdiction of the Civil Court, but the rest of the suit is properly cognizable by such Court. NILMONY SINGH v. CHANDMONI DAS v. LOKH
6 C. L. R., 494

23. Land taken for public purposes—Suit to recover share of money taken as compensation for land.—In a suit to recover the proportion of money paid into Court as compensation for land taken for a railway, to which the plaintiff, a dar-patnidar, may be entitled, and in which suit the zemindar and patnidar are defendants, the plaintiff cannot claim abatement of rent under Act X of 1859, s. 18, since such a claim is cognizable only in a suit instituted under that Act. GORDON STUART & Co. v. MOUTAN CHAND [Marsh., 490]

24. Claim to deduction from rent.—A claim for rent being a recurring cause of action, a tenant is entitled to set up against it for any particular year any right which he had to a deduction or abatement, notwithstanding that he has paid full rent for several previous years. When land is taken away for railway purposes, and compensation made, which is divided between the zemindar and those holding under him, any deduction of rent claimed from the zemindar must be reckoned with reference, not to the gross amount of compensation, but to the proportion which passed into his hands. MOUTAN CHAND v. CHITTAO COOMAR BIDEE 16 W. R., 201

25. In a suit for rent by a zemindar against a patnidar, the latter claimed abatement of the rent on the ground that part of the land included in the patni tenure had been acquired by the Government for public purposes. The kabuli executed by the patnidar contained a provision to the effect that, if any of the land settled should be taken up by Government for public purposes, the zemindar and the patnidar should divide and take in equal shares the compensation money, and a further provision to the effect that the patnidar should "make no objection on the score of diluvion or any other cause to pay the rent fixed or reserved by this kabuli." Held that the patnidar was entitled to abatement of the rent. UMA SUNKUR SIKKAR v. TARINI CHUNDER [I. L. R., 9 Calc., 571; 11 C. L. R., 366]

26. Deduction from Rent.—An ijaradar took on lease certain lands, giving a kabuli which contained the following clause:—"In regard to the aforesaid rent we take upon ourselves the risk of flood and drought, of death and flight, of alluvion and diluvion, of a reduction in the rent, nor will it be open to you to demand more on account of alluvion, etc." During the lease part of these lands were taken up by Government for the purpose of a railway, and compensation was paid to the lessor therefor. The ijaradar claimed to make a deduction from his rent for the land taken away from him. Held that such a claim did not come under the meaning of the word "abatement" as used in the rent law, nor was it intended by the parties to be within the clause of the lease, but the land having been taken from the whole area demised, not by natural causes, but by its major, the ijaradar was entitled to a deduction from the rent, on his showing that there were tenants of his on the land who, before the land was taken by Government, paid rent to him which they had now ceased to pay. WATSON & Co. v. NISTARINI GUPTA I. L. R., 10 Calc., 544

27. In a suit for arrears of rent, a claim for abatement may be made by way of set-off in respect of land taken up by Government for the purposes of a road. DEEN DIAL LALL v. THUKHO KOSWAN 6 W. R., Act X, 24

28. Land Acquisition Act, 1870—Proceedings under for arrears of rent—Beng. Reg. VIII of 1819.—Portion of certain land held under a patni having been taken up by the Government for public purposes under the Land Acquisition Act, the zemindar declared his intention of granting no abatement of rent, and acting upon this declaration the patnidar was allowed to appropriate the whole of the compensation. The patni was subsequently sold under Regulation VIII of 1819, with notice of the amount of the original rent, and the purchaser now sued for abatement of that rent. He did not allege that he had no notice of the proceedings under the Land Acquisition Act. Held that the plaintiff must be presumed to have had notice of these proceedings, and that it was therefore incumbent upon him to have made inquiry regarding the position of the patni, and that under the circumstances he was not entitled to the abatement sought for. PRABI MOHUN MUKERJEE v. AVDHINAJ AFTAB CHAND [10 C. L. R., 526]

29. Previous suit for abatement, effect of—Onus probandi.—There is no provision in the Rent Law prescribing that suits for enhancement or abatement shall not be brought within a certain period after the determination of a similar suit on the same grounds. And there is no provision throwing upon a plaintiff in a suit for abatement of rent the burden of proof that there has been some change in circumstances since a decision in a previous similar suit was passed. CHEDA v. NUNHOO BEG 2 N. W., 348

30. Claim to abatement—"Otherwise vary" the rent.—The words "otherwise vary" in s. 153, Act X of 1859, are meant to include abatement claimable by the ryot; and this reservation is made in respect of questions of right to vary the rent, whether raised by the landlord or by the tenant. ANUND CHUNDER DEGREE v. NUBOCOOLAB CHATTERJEE [8 W. R., 192]

Order for security for costs by Official Assignee when made a party.—S. 106 of the Civil Procedure Code means that a suit abates by the insolvency of the plaintiff, but that the defendant shall not plead the abatement without giving the Official Assignee an opportunity of prosecuting the suit. Where, therefore, the plaintiff, after the institution of a suit, became insolvent, and the defendant thereupon obtained an order that the Official Assignee should give security for the costs of the defendant within fourteen days, and should be made a party to the suit within one month, and that, in default of such security, the suit should be set down for dismissal within eight days after the expiration of the time so limited. Held that such order was irregular. Held, also, that the Official Assignee, having notice of the order, was not entitled to further notice of the setting down of the suit for dismissal, he not having given the security required, and that the giving of such security was a condition precedent to his being made a party to the suit. *IBRAHIM BIN MAHASIN v. The Assistant Judge who heard the appeal was of opinion that, in consequence of the omission on the part of the brothers of the appellant to apply, the appeal abated, and he passed an order accordingly. Held, that the application having been made by the minor son within the time limited by law, the order of abatement made by the Judge was wrong. Although the complete legal representation vested in the minor son and his two brothers, s. 366 of the Civil Procedure Code only required an application to be made by a person claiming to be the legal representative, in order to prevent an order of abatement being made. If neither of the brothers was willing to have his name placed on the record, the respondent was entitled to have them made defendants, so that they might be bound by the decree. were not made parties by the applicants for reasons that were given. The applicants were duly placed on the record as representatives of the deceased appellant within the time limited by art. 175A of sch. II of the Limitation Act. After the period of limitation had elapsed, the respondents applied under ss. 366 and 582 of the Code of Civil Procedure for an order that the appeal had abated on the ground that the former petitioners had not added all the persons who had interests equal to their own in the representation. The Subordinate Judge held that the representation of the two applicants was sufficient to prevent the abatement of the appeal, but he made the other two representatives respondents on the record. He subsequently heard and allowed the appeal. On its being contended, on second appeal, that the appeal to the Subordinate Court had abated and should have been dismissed by reason of the non-joinder of the other two representatives:—Held, that though, in art. 175A of sch. II of the Limitation Act, the application is expressed to be an application under s. 365 of the Code of Civil Procedure and s. 366 is not mentioned, yet for the purpose of considering the question of abatement, the two sections must be read together. When there are more than one legal representative of a deceased appellant, all these representatives must, so far as it is possible for this to be done, join in an application under s. 365 and the words “legal representative” in s. 365 of the Code of Civil Procedure (and similarly the words “any person” and “the legal representative” in s. 366), strictly construed, must, in such a case, be read in the plural and as including all the legal representatives. But where all the representatives cannot be joined as applicants, ss. 365 and 366 should not be construed so as to have the effect of rendering the application an application by “the legal representative” within the meaning of the sections, so that the appeal must be held to have abated. *Bhikaji Ramchandra v. G's brother, one M, thereupon applied for leave to prosecute the appeal as G's representative. Held, refusing the application, that the appeal must abate by reason of G's death. 30. ———— Suit to recover share of joint family property sold in execution of decree—Death of plaintiff-respondent—Survival of right to sue.—In a suit for the recovery of a share of ancestral family property which had been sold in execution of a money decree for a debt contracted by the plaintiff's grandfather, the plaintiff obtained a decree in the Lower Appellate Court, from which the defendant appealed to the High Court. While the appeal was pending, the plaintiff died, and, on her application, his widow was made respondent in his place. At the hearing of the appeal, the appellant contended that, upon the plaintiff's death, the right to sue did not survive, and the appeal should therefore be decreed by the suit being dismissed.—Held by the Full Bench that, judgment having been obtained before the plaintiff's death, the benefit of the judgment, or the right to sue, would survive to his legal representative, though whether the deceased plaintiff's representative could enforce the whole of the judgment in this case was a different matter. Phillips v. Subsequently D applied to the High Court to be brought on the record as legal representative of the deceased. On the 15th April 1886 he was referred to a regular suit to establish his title as such representative, and on the 25th February 1887 such suit was dismissed. Jagdamba Prasad, I. L. R., 10 All., 260. On 24th July 1888 they applied to the High Court to bring certain persons upon the record as the legal representatives of the deceased plaintiff-respondent. Held, that the application, having been made subsequent to the 1st July 1888, when the Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII of 1888) came into force, and being an entirely fresh application not in continuation of any former proceedings between the same parties, must be dealt with under that Act, and not under the Civil Procedure Code as it stood before the amendment; and that as it was made more than six months after the death of the deceased plaintiff-respondent, the appeal abated, with reference to s. 368 of the Code and art. 175C of the Limitation Act. Held also, that the petitioners had not shown “sufficient cause” within the meaning of s. 368 of the Code for not making the application within the prescribed period. *Ram Jiwan Mal v. (Act X of 1872), s. 172.—A, having been accused of an offence under the Penal Code, absconded, and his property was, on the 7th of August 1878, attached by the Magistrate under s. 172 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, Act X of 1872. While the property was so under attachment, it was attached by B in execution of a money-decree against A and sold on the 15th of January 1879, B being the purchaser. On the 21st of April 1880, the Magistrate sold the property to C. It did not appear whether the time fixed by the Magistrate's proclamation for A's appearance had expired at the date of the sale to B. Held, in a suit for possession by B against C, that the title obtained by C under the Magistrate's sale was superior to the title (if any) obtained by B at the sale in execution of the money-decree.—Semble, that after the date of the attachment by the Magistrate under s. 172 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and during its continuance, no title could be conferred by an attachment and sale subsequently made in execution of a money-decree. *GOLAM ABED v. The evidence of accomplices should not be left to the jury without such directions and observations from the Judge as the circumstances of the case may require, pointing out to them the danger of trusting to such evidence when it is not corroborated by other evidence. The omission to do so is an error in law in the summing up by the Judge, and is, on appeal, a ground for setting aside the conviction, when the Appellate Court thinks that the prisoner has been prejudiced by such omission, and that there has been a failure of justice. The rule in s. 114 of the Evidence Act coincides with the rule observed in England, that though the evidence of an accomplice should be carefully scanned and received with caution, and may be treated as unworthy of credit, yet if the jury or the Court credits the evidence, a conviction proceeding upon it is not illegal. REG. v. 16. ————— Evidence of accomplices—Act I of 1872, ss. 114 (b), 133.—The law in India, as expressed in s. 133 and s. 114 of the Evidence Act, and which is in no respect different from the law of England on the subject, is that a conviction based on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice is not illegal, that is, it is not unlawful; but experience shows that it is unsafe, and hence it is the practice of the Judges, both in England and in India, when sitting alone, to guard their minds carefully against acting upon such evidence when uncorroborated, and, when trying a case with a jury, to warn the jury that such a course is unsafe. There must be some corroboration independent of the accomplice, or of a co-confessing prisoner, to show that the party accused was actually engaged directly in the commission of the crime charged against him. A second accomplice does not improve the position of the first, and, if there are two, it is necessary that both should be corroborated. The accomplice must be corroborated not only as to one but as to all of the persons affected by the evidence, and corroboration of his evidence as to one prisoner does not entitle his evidence against another to be accepted without corroboration. R. v. Webb, 6 C. & P., 595, R. v. Dyke, 8 C. & P., 261, R. v. Addis, 6 C. & P., 383, and R. v. Wilkes, 7 C. & P., 272, referred to. The possession of property taken from a murdered person is not adequate corroboration of the evidence of an accomplice charging such person in possession with participation in the murder, though it would, no doubt, be corroboration of evidence that the prisoner participated in a robbery, or that he had dishonestly received stolen property. In the trial of R, S, and M upon a charge of murder, the evidence for the prosecution consisted of (i) the confession of P, who was jointly tried with them for the same offence; (ii) the evidence of an accomplice; (iii) the evidence of witnesses who deposed to the discovery in R's house of property belonging to the deceased; and (iv) the evidence of witnesses who deposed that, on the day when the deceased was last seen alive, all the prisoners were seen together near the place where the body was afterwards found. Held that there was no sufficient corroboration of the

18. ————— Compulsion as an excuse for crime—Pretence as evidence of common intention—Fear of instant death—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 34 and 94—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 133—Power of High Court in Revision.—The accused, who were classers employed in the Revenue Survey Department, were charged, under s. 161 of the Penal Code, with taking bribes from the raiyats of certain villages. The only evidence against the accused was that of persons who had either subscribed to the bribes or collected subscriptions or paid the money to the accused. They stated that they had offered the bribes, because the classers had threatened to raise the assessment, cut down the hedges, and erect new boundary-marks. As regards this evidence, the trying Magistrate remarked that, even if all the witnesses for the prosecution were treated as accomplices, it was open to him to convict on their uncorroborated testimony, as "there was inherent truth in their statements, and circumstances existed which negated the presumption of a conspiracy, and evidenced signs of truthfulness." The Magistrate was also of opinion that there was a distinction between accomplices who volunteered to assist in the receipt of illegal gratifications and those who assisted under compulsion. In the opinion of the Magistrate, the witnesses in the present case belonged to the latter class, and there was no reason to disbelieve their evidence. He, therefore, convicted the accused under s. 161 of the Penal Code, and sentenced them to rigorous imprisonment and fine:—Held (SCOTT, J., dissenting) that the convictions were illegal, there being no evidence to corroborate the witnesses for the prosecution, all of whom were accomplices. Held, also (SCOTT, J., dissenting), that there was such error in the consideration by the Magistrate of the evidence as to prejudice the accused, and such a failure of justice as to justify the Court in revision in setting aside the convictions. Per CURIAM:—The limits of the application of the doctrine of necessity as an excuse for an act otherwise criminal are those prescribed in s. 94 of the Penal Code. Therefore witnesses who, in order to avoid pecuniary injury or personal molestation, had offered or given bribes to a public servant were abettors of the offence of taking an illegal gratification, and their evidence should be treated as that of accomplices. By the law both of India and England the evidence of an accomplice is admissible, and a conviction is not illegal because it proceeds upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice (s. 133 of the Evidence Act, I of 1872). But the presumption that an accomplice is unworthy of credit, unless corroborated in material particulars, has become a rule of practice of almost universal application. Per SCOTT, J.—There may be, however, cases of an exceptional character in which the accomplice evidence alone convinces a Judge, and if he acts on that conviction, circumstance of a person being present on a lawful occasion does not raise a presumption of that person's complicity in an offence then committed so as to make s. 34 of the Penal Code applicable. *Reg. v. The Courts in India found these issues in favour of the widow, and dismissed the suit. The Judicial Committee, in affirming the Court's decrees upon these points, held further that although the estate of the husband was hypothecated for the dower, yet as the heir-at-law would be entitled to the residue after satisfying the widow's claim, he was by right entitled to an account, but as the plaint was so framed as not to admit of an account being taken, the appeal was affirmed, without prejudice to a suit being brought for administration of the deceased's estate upon the footing of the marriage and deed of dower being admitted in the suit. This was without any expression of opinion that, in a suit for an account, an issue may not be raised, at the outset, so clearly as to be ready for decision. But the general rule being the other way, this suit was an example of it. HUBBINATH RAI v. KRISHNA KUMAR BAKSHI

If the defendant is found liable to render such account for a certain period, the Court should make an interlocutory decree declaring that he is so liable, and direct him to file an account in Court within a fixed period. This decree may be enforced under s. 260 of the Civil Procedure Code. After an account has been filed, the plaintiff should be allowed reasonable time to examine it. It was alleged in the plaint that M "left India in 1856, and has since resided in Scotland; that at the time he left he was, and still is, possessed of extensive property in the Province of Bengal, chiefly landed property," that T and afterwards T and F were his agents and managers. In his written statement, M stated that "in the month of June 1861, the deceased rendered an account to the plaintiff showing that all moneys due to him by the plaintiff in respect of his salary and commissions up to the 31st January 1861, being the whole of deceased's claim against him up to that date under their above-mentioned arrangements, had been duly paid by the plaintiff. In the month of April 1865, deceased transmitted to the plaintiff the agency accounts of himself and his firm with the plaintiff in continuation of the accounts rendered by him as mentioned in the preceding paragraph, brought down to the end of February 1865, and again in May 1865, the deceased transmitted the continuation of the said account brought down to the 30th April preceding, being the date of the termination of the agency. The said accounts rendered have been examined by the plaintiff, who verily believes that the true balance now due to him thereon exceeds Rs.1,00,000, without including interest." There was no allegation in the plaint, written statement, or opening of counsel, of fraud or specific error. Held that M, in his plaint and written statement, had not disclosed any cause of action. MACINTOSH v. 15. ——— Right to re-open settled account—Principles of Court of Equity in re-opening accounts—Principles which regulate a Court of Equity in opening stated and settled accounts.—Accounts of long standing and great complication of a mercantile firm at Calcutta, one of the partners of which afterwards acted as agent in England, involving charges for agency and partnership transactions, were mutually agreed to be investigated and closed. After long negotiations and discussion respecting some of the charges, an agreement was come to, the parties agreeing to strike the general balance at a given sum, reserving one item of the account, amounting to a considerable sum, for future investigation. This reserved item was subsequently settled by the acceptance of a bill of exchange for a lesser amount, as such reserved item, if re-opened, would have disarranged the settled general account. The bill of exchange was dishonoured and an action brought to recover the amount. A bill was then filed for an injunction for the cancellation of the bill of exchange, and praying that the accounts so settled might be opened. The Supreme Court at Calcutta held that the reserved item being left open was evidence that the account was not finally closed, and decreed the accounts to be opened, referring the cause to the Master. On appeal, held by the Judicial Committee (reversing such decree, and dismissing the bill with costs) that the transaction amounted to an adjustment of the general account between the parties, subject to the reserved item which was subsequently settled, and that the accounts so settled and closed could not, in the absence of fraud, be re-opened. McKELLER v. The first rule established by s. 4, Regulation XI of 1825, does not apparently contemplate land other than that commonly known as alluvion, viz., land gained by gradual and imperceptible accretion, the incrementum latens of the civil law. There is no express provision in the Regulation for the case of land which has been lost to the original proprietor by the encroachment of the sea or a river, and which, after diluviation, re-appears on the recession of the sea or river, and there is nothing to take away or destroy the original proprietor's right; such a case is to be determined by the general principles of equity and justice under the 5th rule contained in s. 4. A title founded on the original ownership and identification of land re-appearing is to be confined primâ facie to the re-formation on that site. The cases of *Imam Bandi v. 36. ———— Formation of chur—Alluvion—Beng. Reg. XI of 1825, s. 4—Re-formation on old site.—Under Regulation XI of 1825, a right of property in land gained by alluvion from a river (the bed of which is not the property of an individual) is acquired in two modes: first, where the land is gained by gradual accession by the recess of the river, in which case it becomes the property of the person in possession of the estate to which the land is an increment; and secondly, when a chur or island is thrown up in a large navigable river, and the channel between such chur or island is fordable at any season of the year, the accession is an accession to the land or tenure most contiguous. *MOHINI MOHUN DOSS v. 37. ———— Gradual accretion—Land "most contiguous."—Beng. Reg. XI of 1825, s. 4, cl. 3.—The land "most contiguous" to a chur, as that phrase is used in Regulation XI of 1825, s. 4, cl. 3, is intended only to comprise the estate or estates with which the chur comes into contact along the length of the fordable part of a channel; and the whole chur becomes an accession to the land and part of the tenure of the party to whom such estate belongs, and no portion of it will cease to belong to him merely by reason of the deep water between it and the estate of another becoming shallow and fordable. Held, also, that after the chur had, by the first occurrence of the fordable channel, become part of A's property, all further accretions to it, if gained by "gradual accession," would also belong to A, even though the result would, in the aggregate, be a prolongation of the chur in front of estates on the river bank not belonging to him. *GOLAY ALI CHOWDHRY v. —Beng. Reg. XI of 1825.—In a suit brought on the 11th March 1872 to recover certain plots of land (a) as re-formations after diluviation of lands which had belonged to the plaintiffs and as accretions thereto; (b) under a title by prescription; it appeared that the lands had formed in the bed of a river in 1859, and that the plaintiffs took possession thereof as of re-formed lands, and had been maintained in possession under awards under Act IV of 1840, but that in 1868 they were ousted by the Collector, who assessed the same under Regulation XI of 1825 and settled them with his co-defendants. —Held that, whether or not in consequence of Act IX of 1847 the Government were entitled to assess the lands, they were entitled to oust the plaintiffs and to take possession of the lands as lands which had originally formed as an island, and were at their first formation surrounded by water which was not fordable. *WISE v. 52. ——— Formation and attachment to estate of island chur formed in river.
—Defendants were owners, by purchase from Government, of a property called Oojan Chur, which in its origin was an island thrown up in the bed of the river. Plaintiff was owner of the original estate of K, of which a great part was cut off by a stream channel of the river; but afterwards re-appeared, and for some time lay in contiguity with defendant's chur, and separated from plaintiff's estate by the said channel. By the gradual filling up of the sota re-formation became more and more extensive until the land again lay in contact with the plaintiff's estate. As it had been clearly ascertained by boundary marks and measurements that the re-formation took place on the original site of the plaintiff's land, the right of the plaintiff as by re-formation was held to be preferable to that of the defendants, which rested upon accretion. *BUDDUN CHUNDER SHAHA v. established in both those provinces. Both parties were riparian proprietors of adjoining estates on both banks of the river Godavari. The plaintiff claimed the right to newly-formed land, in mid-stream, which she alleged to have been formed by accretion upon an already existing lanka or alluvial island which belonged to her. On that point there were concurrent findings against her. The accretion had taken place upon a lanka owned, not by her, but by the Government, and higher up stream than hers:—Held that the plaintiff must abide by the ground of claim which she had presented below, that being that the new land was formed by gradual accretions to definite and visible portions of a lanka previously belonging to her. This she could not now vary to a claim founded on an ownership of the river-bed on the strength of her being zamindar and owner of the land on both banks of the river, without either issue or evidence directed to such subaqueous ownership. *BALUSU RAMALAKSHMAMMA v. 54. ——— Ownership in re-formed land.—Ownership in soil is not lost because the subject of it becomes submerged; the owner of the site or sub-soil remains owner of the surface, and on re-formation of the surface soil takes whatever falls within his known boundaries. More than three years afterwards the landlord sued for a mandatory injunction to have the mango trees removed. Held that, having stood by for more than three years and allowed the tenant to spend his labour and capital upon the land without taking any action in the matter, the landlord was not entitled to a mandatory injunction. *NOYNA MISSE v. [25 W. R., 461]

35. ————— Conduct defeating title—Evidence of ratification.—The plaintiff, a member of an undivided Hindu family, sued to recover a parcel of land which he alleged his uncle, the first defendant, to have wrongly transferred to the second defendant. The second defendant alleged a sale to him by the first defendant, and a subsequent sale to the third defendant, and denied the plaintiff's title. The Munsif gave a decree for the plaintiff; on appeal, the Principal Sudder Amin, finding that the plaintiff knew of the sale and treating the knowledge as evidence of acquiescence in it, reversed the decision of the Munsif. Held, reversing the decision of the Principal Sudder Amin, that such knowledge would not make the plaintiff a party to the sale by the first defendant, so as to bar his right to recover the land for which he sued in ejectment. A person who seeks to bar one who is primæ facie the legal owner, by evidence of ratification, or of facts cogent enough to prove one not a formal to be a substantial party, must make and prove such a case, for he is one who seeks to displace a legal title. *RAJAN v. On the question whether the solehnama should be set aside, at the instance of the two daughters, on the ground of its having been beyond their mother's power to bind them, and of the instruments having been prejudicial to their interests, the evidence showed that it had been acted on and followed by possession, and that the daughters had, after attaining full age, allowed a lengthened period of twenty years to elapse without taking proceedings to dispute it:—Held that, if the mother had exceeded her powers in executing the solehnama on their behalf, and if they might, at one time, have had it set aside, their long acquiescence was sufficient to show ratification of the transaction; and the solehnama was land being marked out as theirs. Held that it was competent for the Assistant Judge to come to that conclusion under the circumstances, and that there was no ground for saying that there was any error of law in his decision, which was accordingly affirmed. SULE v. not such as would prohibit the present suit; and, unless the meaning were clear, its operation should be limited to suits for damages on account of anything done in good faith; for instance, in a case of ouster of 1847 repealed everything in the Regulations which enacted by what officers and how the question of liability to assessment should be tried, and therefore took away from Collectors and Boards of Revenue the power of giving any binding decision on the point. Held also (MITTEN, J., dissenting) that the effect of the words "shall be final" in s. 6 was to make the assessment final in every case in which there was jurisdiction to assess, but to leave it open to the Civil Courts to inquire in each case whether there was such jurisdiction, or whether the lands assessed were liable to assessment. Per MITTEN, J.—S. 1 has not abolished the judicial functions of the Revenue authorities under Regulation II of 1819; all that has been abolished by that section are the tribunals constituted by Regulation III of 1828. Per MITTEN, J.—The proceedings of the Revenue authorities under s. 6 embrace an inquiry upon two questions, viz., the question of the liability to assessment, and the rate of assessment, and under the express wording of the section the finality attaches to the whole order of the Sudder Board of Revenue. FAHAMDANISSA BEGUM v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL.

[I. L. R., 14 Calc., 67]

Held, on appeal to the Privy Council—A review of the legislation anterior to Act IX of 1847 shows that whilst it was intended to bring under assessment lands not included in the permanent settlement, whether waste or gained by alluvion or dereliction from sea or rivers, yet all such lands as were comprised in permanently-settled estates were to be rigorously excluded from further assessment. Lands included in the permanent settlement having afterwards been covered by water, and having then been formed again on the same site, held not to be lands "gained" from the river by alluvion or dereliction within the meaning of Regulation II of 1819, that expression being confined to meaning lands gained since the period of the settlement. The effect of Act IX of 1847 was merely to change the mode of assessment in the case of land already liable to be assessed under legislation in force when that Act became law. It was not the object of that Act to bring under liability land re-formed on the site of land previously lost, within the area of a permanently-settled estate, the revenue upon which had been paid without abatement since the permanent settlement. Where an order of the Board of Revenue, purporting to be made under Act IX of 1847, subjected land included in the permanent settlement to assessment,—Held that the District Civil Court had jurisdiction (which, therefore, might be invoked as a matter of right) to entertain a suit brought by the landowner contesting that order, and to declare it unauthorized by law. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. See SURVEY AWARD . 23 W. R., 173

1. — Award—Decision on non-appearance of parties.—Act XIII of 1848 "for the greater security of pre-emptory titles in the Presidency of Bengal, derived from awards made by the revenue authorities under Regulation VII of 1822, Regulation IX of 1825, and Regulation IX of 1833 of the Bengal Code," by s. 3, enacted that no suit should be entertained for contesting the justice of any award of the revenue authorities under any of these Regulations made after the passing of the Act after the expiration of three years from the date of the final award. A suit for the amendment of a map was referred by the Deputy Collector to an Ameen for the purpose of a local investigation, and the Ameen returned that, neither of the parties appearing before him, he was unable to make the investigation, whereupon the Deputy Collector struck the case out. Held that this was not an award within the meaning of the Act. GOLAM KODDSE CHOWDHURY v. RASHU CHUNDER GHOSE . . . Marsh., 323

2. — In order to apply the provisions of Act XIII of 1848 in regard to limitation, it was necessary to show that there was an award, i.e., an adjudication after a contention between the parties before the survey authorities. HUNTER MONUN TILAKOOR v. ANDREWS . W. R., 1864, 30

3. — Suit to assess land—Boundary suit.—Act XIII of 1848 did not apply to bar a suit to assess land as rent-paying. A decision in a boundary suit decides only the question of right to possession of the land, irrespective of the right to assess. MAHOMED ALI KHAN CHOWDHURY v. JADUB CHUNDER CHUCKERBUTTY . W. R., 1864, 60

4. — Awards made by Collectors—Beng. Regs. VII of 1822, IX of 1825, and IX of 1833.—Act XIII of 1848 was limited to awards made by Collectors under Bengal Regulations VII of 1822, IX of 1825, and IX of 1833, which gave to the revenue authorities judicial power to determine questions of possession and other matters with a right of appeal to the regular Courts against their awards. An order of the Collector for the mutation of names in the register is not an award of the nature contemplated by the Regulation XIII of 1848, and an appeal from it was not subject to the limitation of three years prescribed thereby. JEWALA BUKSH v. DHARUM SINGH
[10 Moore's I. A., 511]

2. ———— Hindu and Maho-medan Law.—There is no indication in whatever in Act XL of 1858 of any intention to alter or affect any provisions of Hindu or Mahomedan law as to persons who do not avail themselves of the Act. The scope of the enactment is merely to remove legislative prohibitions, to confer expressly a certain jurisdiction, and to define exactly the position of those who avail themselves of, or are brought under, the Act, leaving persons to whom any existing rules of law apply unaffected. RAM CHUNDER CHUCKERBUTTY v.
BROJONATH MOZUMDAR . I. L. R., 4 Calc., 323
[4 C. I. R., 227]

3. ———— Mahomedan Law.
—Act XL of 1858 comprises the cases of all persons not under the Court of Wards and not being European British subjects, and acts irrespective of the Mahomedan law, which can be no guide to the Civil Court in determining whether an applicant should or should not have letters of administration. AKIMA
BIBEE v. AZEEM SARUNG . 9 W. R., 334

4. ———— Mahomedan Law.
—Act XL of 1858 authorizes a Court to select a guardian irrespective of the law of the parties (e.g., Mahomedan law), but does not prevent the selection of a guardian indicated by such law if he be a fit
person. MORTUNNUDDY BEGUM v. GOVT. PROVISOR

4. ———— Minority—Majority Act (IX of 1875), s. 3.—A certificate of guardianship under Act XL of 1858 takes effect, not from the date when it is applied for, nor when an order granting it is passed, but from the date when it is actually issued. Therefore, where an application for a certificate was made in 1877, and an order granting it was passed in December 1879, but the certificate was not issued until December 1881, —Held that the minor, in respect of whose property the certificate was applied for, who had between the date of the application and the issue of the certificate attained the age of 14 years, and signed a promissory note, was not entitled to take advantage of s. 3 of the Majority Act, 1875, and set up the plea of minority as a defence to a suit on the note. 5. ———— Guardian, Appointment of—Period from which appointment dates.—The making of an order appointing a guardian under Act XL of 1858, and not the subsequent taking out of the certificate, is that by which a guardian is appointed of the person and property of a minor within the meaning of s. 3 of the Indian Majority Act. CHUNDER MUL JOHARY v. BROJONATH ROY CHOWDHURY . . . I. L. R., 8 Cal., 967

6. ———— Period from which authority of guardian dates—Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), s. 6.—S. 6 of the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), which says that a certificate under Act XL of 1858 (among other documents) "shall not be filed, exhibited, or recorded in any Court of Justice or received or furnished by any public officer," unless a certain fee be paid, means that such certificate cannot come into existence until the person who has the permission of the Court to obtain it deposits the requisite amount of stamp duty. Independently of this section, however, the preparation of such a certificate after the order granting it is not a purely ministerial act; it must then be applied for by the grantee: and it is from the date of the certificate being actually taken out, and not from the date of the order granting it, that a guardian of the person and property of a minor is to be considered as appointed under Act XL of 1858. Where, therefore, on a petition for such a certificate by J, an order was made that the "application be allowed," and in a suit on certain bonds, in which suit the minor in respect of whose person and property the petition for a certificate was made was a defendant, he was represented by J, by whom no certificate had been actually taken out.—Held, in a suit by the minor to set aside the decree as not binding on him, that without the certificate J had no authority to appear on behalf of the minor, and the latter, not having been properly represented in the suit brought against him, was entitled to have the decree set aside. Stephen v. Stephen, I. L. R., 8 Cal., 714, and on appeal, I. L. R., 9 Cal., 901, followed. Chunee Mul Johary v. Brojonath Roy Chowdhury, I. L. R., 8 Cal., 967, dissented from. SAHAT NAND v. MUNGSIKRAM MARWARI . I. L. R., 12 Cal., 542

Held, however, on appeal by the Privy Council reversing the above decision, that, when a Court to which application has been made under s. 3 of Act XL of 1858 for a certificate has adjudged the applicant entitled to have one, he then substantially obtains it, although it may not be drawn up or issued at the time. Having obtained such an order, he has in substance complied with the terms of the Act, in the same way as when a plaintiff has judgment that he shall have a decree in his suit, it may be said that he has then obtained his decree. Therefore, when a minor had been represented in a suit by a person who had obtained an order for a certificate under s. 3, but had not had it issued to him, the absence of a certificate was held to be not such an irregularity as entitled the minor, on coming of age, to have the proceedings set aside on the ground that he had not been properly represented. 7. ———— Guardian—Minority—Suit by minor—Certificate of Administration.—Whenever an application is made for the appointment of a guardian under Act XL of 1858, and an order is passed appointing a person to be guardian of the minor, even though no certificate be taken out by the person so appointed, the minor becomes a ward of Court, and the period of his minority is extended to 21 years. Stephen v. Stephen, I. L. R., 8 Cal., 714, and on appeal, I. L. R., 9 Cal., 901, dissented from; Chunee Mul Johary v. Brojonath Roy Chowdhury, I. L. R., 8 Cal., 967, followed. GRISH CHUNDER CHOWDHURY v. 8. ———— Appointment of guardian without proof of certificate being taken out—Presumption as to regularity of proceedings—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 114, illus. (e).—In a suit by a puiśne mortgagee against the prior as well as the subsequent mortgagees and the mortgagor's representative it was found that the prior mortgages were executed when the mortgagor was over 18, but under 21. A guardian of his person had been appointed under Act XL of 1858, but there was no evidence as to whether a certificate of administration had also been granted under that Act. The prior mortgagees thereupon contended that under Act XL of 1858 a guardian of the person could not be appointed unless a certificate of administration was also granted, and there being no evidence of the latter being granted, this appointment of a guardian of the person alone was ultra vires. Held that, assuming (but without deciding the point) that under Act XL of 1858 a guardian of the person could not be appointed unless a certificate of administration was also granted, an independent appointment of a guardian of the person may be made, and there being no

21. ————— Held that the plaintiff, not being legally or formally appointed manager or guardian of a minor's estate or person, was incompetent to maintain the suit on his (the minor's) behalf, especially when the minor's natural father has been appointed as such under Act XL of 1858, and has not been discharged from his office. SETUL PERSHAD v. BIRJ MOHUN DASS 1 Agra, 25

22. ————— Waiver of objection.—Duty of Judge.—That the persons who sue on behalf of minors are their natural guardians is not a sufficient reason for neglecting the directions of law which require that the minors shall be represented by persons who have obtained certificates, or by persons who, when the property is of small value, are specially permitted by the Court to sue or defend the suit on behalf of minors. The fact that the defendant's pleader did not press the objection, does not relieve the Judge from the duty imposed on him of seeing that the minors were properly represented. ZOBAWAR SINGH v. JAWAHIR SINGH 3 Agra, 167

24. ————— Son adopted pending suit.—When adoption takes place while a suit is pending on the part of the widow and the adopted son is a minor, it is necessary that he should be substituted for his adoptive mother as the party preferring the appeal, and be duly represented in conformity with the provisions of s. 3, Act XL of 1858. COLLECTOR OF BAREILLY v. [3 Agra, 220]

27. ————— Permission of Court.—From the fact that in a former suit the plaintiff's mother was arrayed among the parties as his guardian as well as from the line of defence she then adopted and in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, it was presumed that she had the permission of the Court to appear and represent the minor's interest in that suit, and therefore the decision in that suit was held to be binding on the minor in a subsequent suit where the same question was raised. BONOMALLY KESH v. 29. ————— Beng. Reg. X of 1793.—Suit on behalf of minors.—In a case in which Regulation X of 1793 has no application, the Court may, under s. 3, Act XL of 1858, allow a friend or relative of the minor to institute a suit on his behalf, and where the guardian omits to take steps for the protection of the infant, the Court may allow another person to sue for the benefit of the latter. MODHOOL SOODUN SINGH v. 30. ————— Guardian or next friend.—In a suit brought on behalf of a minor by his next friend, it is not necessary for the next friend to have a certificate under Act XL of 1858, provided he have in fact permission of the Court to sue. ALIM BAKSH FAKIR v. JHALOL BEMI

31. ————— Next friend.—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 440—S. 440 of the Civil Procedure Code, read with s. 3 of Act XL of 1858, does not make the receipt from the Court of a written permission to sue compulsory upon the next friend of an infant plaintiff. NEWAJ v. MAHMOUD ALI I. L. R., 12 Calc., 131

32. ————— Suit on behalf of minor.—Permission to relative to sue.—The mother of a minor, who had not obtained a certificate under Act XL of 1858, instituted a suit on behalf of the minor for some property of small value. She did not ask the Court in which she instituted the suit for permission to institute it, as required by s. 3 of that Act, but the Court entertained it, the defendant not raising the objection that it had been instituted without permission, and it was decided on the merits in favour of the minor. Held that, under these circumstances, it must be taken, notwithstanding there was no order allowing the mother to sue, that the suit was instituted with the Court's permission. KEDAR NATH v. DEBI DIN I. L. R., 4 All., 165

33. ————— Right of holder of certificate to defend suits connected with minor's estate.—Under s. 3 of the Bengal Minors Act (XL of 1858), the Civil Court has no power to refuse to admit a person who has obtained a certificate of administration under the Act to defend a suit on the minor's behalf, as guardian of such minor. BALDEO DAS v. GOBIND SHANKAR I. L. R., 7 All., 914

34. ————— Right to defend without certificate.—Appearance on behalf of minor.—No judgment or order passed in a suit, to which a minor, subject to the provisions of Act XL of 1858, is a party, will bind him on his attaining majority unless he is represented in the suit by some person who has either taken out a certificate or has obtained the permission of the Court to sue or defend on his behalf without a certificate. 8. ————— Purchaser from guardian. Per GUPTA, C.J.—Previously to the passing of Act XL of 1858, where a suit was brought by a minor on coming of age, to recover property sold by his guardian during his minority, it was generally incumbent upon the purchaser to prove that he acted in good faith; that he made proper enquiry as to the necessity for the sale and had honestly satisfied himself of the existence of that necessity. Now under s. 18 of that Act, the Civil Court not only has the power, but is bound to enquire into the circumstances of each case, and to determine whether, as a matter of law and prudence, it is right that any property sold or mortgage of the minor's property should take place; and if the Court, upon the materials and information brought before it by the guardian, makes an order for sale, a purchaser under such an order is not bound to make the same enquiry, which the Judge has made, and to determine for himself whether the Judge has done his duty properly and come to a right conclusion. Where a plaintiff alleges fraud or illegality as a ground for setting aside a sale made under s. 18, the onus lies upon him to make out a prima facie case of fraud or illegality, and to show that the debt, which formed the consideration for the sale in such case, was one for which the minor was not responsible. PER PRINSEY, J.—A stranger purchasing from a guardian, acting under the authority granted under s. 18 of Act XL of 1858, will be entitled to every protection from the Courts, so long as it is not shown that he acted in a fraudulent or collusive manner, knowing that the debts for the liquidation of which the purchase-money would be applied, were not debts lawfully binding on the minor. The burden of proof in such a case will lie heavily on the person seeking to set aside the alienation. But where the purchaser is himself the creditor, and therefore the means of satisfying a Court as to the origin and nature of the debts and how they are binding on the minor, the burden of proof is shifted on the purchaser, when the plaintiff has established a prima facie case. *IKKERH CHUND v. 10. ————— Guardian and minor—Mortgage by certificated guardian without sanction of District Court—Mortgage money applied partly to benefit of minor's estate—Suit by minor to set aside the mortgage—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 65.—S. 18 of the Bengal Minors Act (XL of 1958) does not imply that a sale or mortgage or a lease for more than five years, executed by a certificated guardian without sanction of the Civil Court, is illegal and void ab initio; but the proviso means that in the absence of such sanction the certificated guardian, who otherwise would have all the powers which the minor would have if he were of age, shall be relegated to the position which he would occupy if he had been granted no certificate at all. If any one chooses to take a mortgage or a lease for a term exceeding five years under these circumstances, the transaction is on the basis of no certificate having been granted. In a suit brought by the guardian of a Mahomedan minor for a declaration that a mortgage deed executed by the minor's mother was null and void to the extent of the minor's share and for partition and possession of such share, it was found that a considerable portion of the moneys received by the mortgagee had been applied for the benefit of the minor's estate by discharging incumbrances imposed on it by his deceased father. It appeared that at the time of the mortgage, the mother held a certificate of guardianship under the Bengal Minors Act, and that she had not obtained from the Civil Court any order sanctioning the mortgage under s. 18 of that Act:—Held that the omission to obtain such sanction did not make the mortgage illegal or void ab initio, but relegated the parties to the position in which they would have been if no certificate had been granted, i.e., that of a transaction by a Mahomedan mother affecting to mortgage the property of her minor son, with whose estate she had no power to interfere. Held that this fell within the class of cases in which it has been decided that if a person sells or mortgages another's property, having no legal or equitable right to do so, and that other benefits by the transaction, the latter cannot have it set aside without making restitution to the person whose money has been applied for the benefit of the estate. Held that, even if mortgages executed by a certificated guardian without the sanction required by s. 18 of the Bengal Minors Act were void, the section did not make them illegal; and, with reference to s. 65 of the Contract Act, the plaintiff could not obtain a decree for a declaration that the mortgage was inoperative as against his share, except on condition of his making restitution to the extent of any moneys advanced by the defendant under the mortgage-deed which had gone to the

8. Failure to produce accounts.—An applicant for a certificate under Act XL of 1858 having alleged that the appointed guardians had neglected their charge in various ways, the Judge called upon the guardians to produce their accounts, and on their failing to do so took away their certificate, and gave it to the applicant. Held that the Judge would have been justified, if s. 21 in cancelling the guardians' certificate, if sufficient cause were shown; but he had no authority to do what he did, the accounts which a Judge can call for under that section being those which a discharged guardian is to furnish to his successor in office, and the only way in which a guardian retaining office can be made to furnish such accounts is by a regular suit brought by a relative or friend of the minor. RAM DIAL GOOYE v. AMRIT LALL KHANNA. 9 W. R., 555

10. Waste by Hindu widow.—Acts of waste on the part of the widow in regard to her husband's property, if proved, would be a ground for withdrawing a certificate granted to her under Act XL of 1858. BHAGWANEE KOONWAL v. PARBUTTY KOONWAL 2 W. R., 13

12. Mismanagement.—A certificate having been granted to A under Act XL of 1858 in 1872 on the death of the father of a minor, in 1882 the mother of the minor applied that the certificate should be recalled on the ground of mismanagement, and that another should be granted to herself. The District Judge, assuming that the minor was a member of a joint family, held that the original certificate ought never to have been granted, recalled the certificate, and dismissed the application. Held that A, having obtained the certificate, brought himself within the jurisdiction of the Court under Act XL of 1858, and that the Court ought to have considered the charges against him. DEORANI KOER v. PARUSMAN NARAIN [12 C. L. R., 546]

14. Removal of guardian—Immorality of guardian.—Where charges of immorality were brought against the holder of a certificate under Act XL of 1858, it was held to be the duty of the Judge to enquire into the truth of the charges and the fitness of the certificate-holder. MOHUNDDY BAGUM v. 18. Ground for removal.—A certificate of guardianship was cancelled under s. 21, Act XL of 1858, in a case where the guardian, without any sufficient cause or justification, and without legal advice, withdrew an appeal made to set aside a sale of the estate of the minors, and at the same time dealt with the auction-purchaser and obtained a putnee of a portion of that very property in the name of his own wife. PITAMBER DEY MOZOOMDAR v. ISHAN CHUNDER DUTT BISWAS [18 W. R., 189]

17. Ground for removal.—An application for the removal of guardians or parties appointed to take charge of the estate of a minor under Act XL of 1858, s. 7, must be supported by proof of malversation or misconduct such as would afford sufficient ground for removal. RAJESWARRE DEBIA v. JOGENDRO NATH ROY 23 W. R., 278

18. Removal of manager of estate.—Grounds for removal.—A manager of the estate of a minor appointed by will is liable to removal only upon proof of actual malversation, or that by reason of mental incapacity, conviction of felony, or by some other incapacitating cause, he has become incapable of managing the property; but not merely on the ground that another person would manage the property better. He is, it seems, subject to removal upon summary application under Act XL of 1858, s. 21; but if the ground upon which his removal is applied for involves an investigation of accounts, such investigation must be made in a regular suit under s. 19, previous to such summary application under s. 21. MUDHOOSOODPUR SINGH v. MARSH, 244

19. Power of Judge and s. 16—Power of Judge to order accounts from Guardian—Discharged guardian.—A Judge has no power under s. 16 or 21, Act XL of 1858, to order a discharged guardian of a minor to file his account. S. 21 refers to the procedure as between discharged guardians and their successors, and not to a case where the contest is between the owner of the estate and a discharged guardian. DOOLUX SINGH v. NARAIN SINGH 4 W. R., 13

1. Procedure—Objections to certificate.—A certificate under Act XL of 1858 having been granted to a party as guardian of an adopted minor, it was objected that the minor's adoption had not been legal. Held that, as there was no doubt of the fact of adoption, whether the certificate was rightly given, and as the objector did not claim to be appointed guardian, he had no locus standi to object to the appointment of another person. KISTO KISHORE ROY v. — s. 5—Manager of estate under attachment.—Sale for arrears of revenue—Portion of estate.—Act XI of 1859 is, to a great extent, a remedial Act, passed for the benefit of the subject, and in order to relax the stringency of former Statutes, whereby the Crown was empowered to sell estates for non-payment of revenue. S. 5 of the said Act applies to estates which are under attachment issued under Act VIII of 1859, and which are in the hands of a manager appointed on the application of the judgment-debtor for the purpose of liquidating the debts. Such attachments are not superseded by the appointment of such manager. The words "arrears of estates under attachment" apply to cases where a portion only of an estate is under attachment, as well as to cases in which the whole estate has been attached. *BUNWARI LALL SAKU v. — ss. 5 and 6—Notification of sale, specification of—"Estate," Meaning of.—Under s. 6 of Act XI of 1859, it is not necessary that a notification should specify the owners of an estate or the owners of shares in the estate. Secretary of State, v. Rashbehary Mookerjee, I. L. R., 9 Calc., 591, followed. All that is necessary under that section is that the notification should specify the estate or shares in the estate to be sold, and in selling a share in an estate it is unnecessary to specify the shares or mouzahs of which that share is composed. The word "estate," as there used, ordinarily means "mehal," but the term also applies to a portion of a mehal with regard to which a separate account has been opened, but not to an undivided portion of a mehal as to which separate accounts are not kept. *RAM NARAIN ROER v. The same person subsequently obtained an advance of Rs10, to be re-imbursed by a monthly deduction of one rupee from his wages. He worked from 1st March 1899 till 18th September 1899 when he ceased to work, leaving in all a sum of Rs5 to be accounted for in the adjustment of the total advance. He was subsequently charged and convicted under s. 2 of the Criminal Breach of Contract Act XIII of 1859:—Held that the initial advance of one rupee was not money advanced on account of work to be performed, but rather a loan made without interest on the condition that the workman would enter into a contract of service for the duration of the loan; and that the Criminal Breach of Contract Act, 1859, was inapplicable to this case; that, with reference to the ten rupees to be repaid out of wages, the Act applied, and an order should be made directing the workman to work until the expiration of the term of the contract on account of which this sum had been advanced. *TANGI JOGHI v. It is doubtful whether a proceeding under the first clause of s. 2 and under s. 3 of Act XIII of 1859 is a criminal proceeding. There is no offence committed, and there is no accused. The provisions of s. 370 of the Criminal Procedure Code are therefore inapplicable to a case of this nature. AYERAM DAS MOCHI v. ABDUL RAHIM

5. ——— Suit to compel heir of manager to make good deficiency.—Leave of Court.—Act XX of 1863 does not apply to a suit brought by the dharmakarta of a temple and one of its worshippers to compel the defendant, as heir of the late manager, to make good, out of the property inherited by him, the deficiency in the devasthanam funds caused by breach of trust and misappropriation by the late manager. The leave of the Civil Court for the institution of such a suit is not necessary, and the suit is maintainable. The right of instituting such suits is not a privilege accorded by Act XX of 1863, but a pre-existing right. JAYANGARU LAYARU v. DURMA DOSSJI . . . 4 Mad., 2

6. ——— Suit to eject Dharmakarta or agents from temple.—Right of Government to divest itself of power of interfering with appointment.—Mad. Reg. VII of 1817.—Plaintiffs, members of the committee appointed under Act XX of 1863, sued to eject defendants (the dharmakarta and his agents) from the possession and management of the temple dedicated to Sri Viraragava Swami at Trivellore and to establish their (plaintiffs') right to the possession and control of the said temple. Defendants denied the right of the plaintiffs to exercise any control whatever over the temple. This right depended upon whether, at the period of the passing of Act XX of 1863, the nomination vested in, was exercised by, or was subject to the confirmation of, the Government, or any public officer. It was admitted that in 1842 the Board of Revenue did, so far as it could, divest itself of all right to interfere with the appointment of a dharmakarta, but it was contended for the plaintiffs that it was not in the power of the Board of Revenue so to divest itself of the duties imposed upon it by Regulation VII of 1817. Held that, assuming the Board of Revenue

The Civil Judge found that the grant was for the performance of religious ceremonies and pious observances only, and that the plaintiff had led a vicious life and been guilty of malversation in his office, and, being of opinion that the plaintiff had been properly deprived of the lands belonging to the muth, under Madras Regulation VII of 1817, dismissed the suit. Held that, under s. 4 of Act XX of 1863, the plaintiff became entitled, on the passing of the Act, to the restoration of the endowment. JESAGHEBI GOSAMBER v. 2. ———— Right to sue for removal of trustees—Religious endowment.—S. 14 of Act XX of 1863 is sufficiently general in its terms to empower any person interested in any temple, mosque, or religious endowment, or in the performance of the trusts relating thereto, to sue the trustee, manager, or superintendent, or the member of a committee appointed under the Act for misfeasance, and also to empower the Court to order the removal of a trustee, etc. The tomb of a reputed saint became a place of pilgrimage, and an endowment was made for the maintenance of the shrine and for the performances of certain religious ceremonies. There was a practice on the part of the proprietors and the managers of the institution to divide among themselves the residue of the income and to dispose by way of sale or mortgage of the share enjoyed by them. Held that this was a religious institution within the meaning of Act XX of 1863. An order under s. 14, Act XX of 1863, should be mandatory, and not prohibitory. Where a sacred book was kept at a temple, and was an object of veneration to the members of the sect entitled to worship there: Held that a suit would lie under s. 14 of Act XX of 1863 by some of the persons interested in the temple, to restrain the superintendent from removing the book to another place, and that he should be directed to retain it as a portion of the furniture of the temple. DHURRUM SINGH v. 9. ———— Trustee, manager, or superintendent of mosque—Application of Act.—The words “trustee, manager, or superintendent of a mosque” etc., mentioned in Act XX of 1863, mean the trustee, manager, or superintendent of a mosque, etc., to which the provisions of the Act are applicable, not the trustee, etc., of any mosque. And such persons are those to whom the provisions of Regulation XIX of 1810 were applicable. The mosques, etc., to which the provisions of that Regulation were applicable, were mosques for the support of which endowments had been granted in land by the Government of the country or by individuals; and the mosques, etc., to which the provisions of Act XX of 1863 apply are, not any mosques, etc., but any mosques for the support of which endowments in land have been made by the Government or private individuals. JAN ALI v. RAM NATH MUNDUL, I. L. R., 8 Calc., 32 [9 C. L. R., 433.]

10. ———— Suit by committee against manager for misappropriation—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Leave to sue.—A committee appointed under Act XX of 1863 may, without leave of the Court, previously obtained, sue their manager, or superintendent, for damages for misappropriation and for an injunction. The provisions of Act XX of 1863, s. 14, do not apply to such suits by the committee themselves. PUNDOLAH ROY v. RAMGOPAL CHATTERJEE, I. L. R., 9 Calc., 133 [11 C. L. R., 333.]

11. ———— Suit against dismissed trustee to recover temple property.—A suit by the trustees to recover the property of a temple from an ex-trustee who has been properly dismissed from his office by the temple committee is not governed by s. 14 of Act XX of 1863. VERASAMI NAYADU v. SUBBA RAM, I. L. R., 6 Mad., 54.

12. ———— Hereditary trusteeship—Suspension from trusteeship and right of puja—Maintenance in office on terms.—Suit by certain dikshadars or hereditary trustees of the Chitambaram temple against others of the dikshadars praying for their removal from office and for a money decree alleging that they had been jointly guilty of misconduct in respect of temple property in their custody and had obstructed the repair of certain shrines. The District Judge passed a decree suspending some of the defendants from the office of trustee and the right of puja for a period which was not defined; he also passed a decree for the money claimed:—Held that the operation of Act XX of 1863 was not excluded by the admission that the trusteeship was hereditary in certain families; and that the District Judge had jurisdiction under Act XX of 1863 to deprive the defendants of the right of puja. Held, further, on the evidence that the defendants merited the punishment which had been inflicted on them. Decreed that the suspension of the defendants be withdrawn on the terms that they file an undertaking with two sureties that they would restore certain property belonging to the temple now missing, and that they would duly conform to the decision of the majority of dikshadars as to the management of temple affairs, etc. NATESA v. GANAPATI

[I. L. R., 14 Mad., 103]

13. ———— Suit to carry out endowment.—In a suit by the mutwalli of a large Mahomedan establishment, acting on behalf of the Mahomedaus of the neighbourhood, to secure the performance of trusts of a deed of appropriation by a Mahomedau, the plaintiff was held, with reference to the words of ss. 14 and 15, Act XX of 1863, to be a person interested in the preservation of the trust, and a proper person to bring the suit. He was not required under those sections to have any interest in the trust, direct or immediate, or any share in the management of the property. DOYAL CHUND MULLICK v. KERAMUT ALI

14. ———— Religious endowment—Applicability of the Act—Madras Regulation VII of 1817.—In a suit brought with the leave of the District Court under Act XX of 1863, to remove the trustees of a Hindu temple, it did not appear that the trustees were nominated by or subject to the confirmation of the Government or any public officer:—Held that Act XX of 1863 was not applicable to the temple unless it was admitted or proved by evidence that the endowment was one which would have fallen under the provisions of Regulation VII of 1817. MUTHU v. GANGATHARA, I. L. R., 17 Mad., 95.

15. ———— Madras Regulation VII of 1817—Joinder of purchasers in a suit against trustee.—A temple having been endowed with immoveable property after the passing of Madras Regulation VII of 1817 and before the Religious Endowments Act (XX of 1863), and the trustee having without authority sold the same, a suit was instituted under Act XX of 1863 against the trustee and the purchasers of the property, to annul the sales and to declare the right of the temple thereto:—Held (1) that a transferee of trust property, under a transaction which amounts to a breach of trust on the part of the trustee of the institution, cannot be proceeded against under the provisions of the Religious Endowments Act, 1863; and (2) that the trustee of a public religious institution can be sued under the provisions of the Religious Endowments Act, 1863, notwithstanding the fact that the institution came into existence after Regulation VII of 1817 was passed. *SIVAYYA v. Hindu family, applied for and (in the presence of the defendants) obtained leave to institute a suit against the defendants, who were the shobais of a certain idol, for the purpose of having them removed from their public worship. After issues had been framed, the Court of first instance made an order, under s. 16 of

The wakfnama was publicly registered. But though the property was styled "wakf," and A the mutwalli thereof, in all documents connected with the estate, A all along continued to deal with it as absolute proprietress, and the dedication, though made in 185, was never under the control of the Board of Revenue or of local agents. In a suit, which the plaintiffs obtained leave to institute under s. 18 of Act XX of 1863, to remove A from the mutwalliship, on the ground of misfeasance.—Held, the wakfnama did not constitute a public religious establishment within the meaning of Act XX of 1863, and that, therefore, the Judge below had no authority to give the plaintiffs, under s. 18, leave to sue; and that his decision was consequently ultra vires. S. 18 of Act XX of 1863 applies only to such religious establishments as were under the control or superintendence

2. ————— Right of beneficiaries under deed of endowment.—Act XX of 1863, while it empowers persons to sue whose right to sue, independently of the Act, may be doubtful, does not deprive persons claiming to be beneficiaries under a deed of endowment of the right to sue, which they have independently of the Act, nor does it impose on them the necessity of obtaining the sanction to institute the suit required by s. 18 of the Act. KULAB HOSSEIN v. [4 N. W., 155]

3. ————— Suit to have trusts of endowment carried out.—An appropriator, who sues on the ground that the trust created, so far as it related to the appointment of mutwallis, had never been acted upon, and that the original rights of the appropriator remain, is at liberty to bring such a suit without leave of the Court, under s. 18 of Act XX of 1863. HIDAITOONNISSA v. AFZUL HOSSEIN
[2 N. W., 420]

4. ————— Sanction to suit—Suit brought different from the suit sanctioned—Rejection of plaint.—A and B, being worshippers at a Hindu temple, obtained sanction under s. 18 of the Religious Endowments Act to sue for the removal of the managers of the temple on the ground of breach of trust and for damages. A and B sued to remove the managers, but claimed no damages in their plaint:—Held that, as the suit instituted differed from the one for which sanction was given, the plaint was properly rejected. SRINIVASA v. 1. ——— Seizure of Raj of Tanjore—Jurisdiction of Municipal Courts—Independent States.—The transactions of Independent States between each other are governed by other laws than those which Municipal Courts administer. The seizure by the British Government, acting as a sovereign power, through its delegate, the East India Company, of the Raj of Tanjore, with the property belonging thereto, was, with its consequences, an act of State over which a Municipal Court has no jurisdiction. *THE EAST INDIA COMPANY v. S. C. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. KAMACHEE BOYE SAHIBA . 7 Moore's I. A., 476

2. ——— Arrest under Beng. Reg. III of 1818—Jurisdiction of Municipal Courts.—A Mahomedan subject of the Crown was arrested in Calcutta, taken into the m'fussil, and there detained in jail, under a warrant of the Governor-General in Council in the form prescribed by Reg. III of 1818. Held that such arrest and detainer were not acts of State, but matters cognizable by a Municipal Court. IN BE AMEER KHAN . 6 B. L. R., 392

3. ——— Resumption of Jagir by East India Company—Regulation law.—Where lands were held by a jagirdar under the sovereign of an independent State on a jaidad tenure, i.e., on a grant of land, together with the public revenues thereof, on the condition of keeping up a body of troops to be employed when called on in the service of the sovereign, and on the conquest of the State by the East India Company the jagirdar remained in the same position to the Company.—Held that the resumption of the lands by the Company, and the seizure of the arms and stores appertaining to the tenure, on the death of the jagirdar, was not an act of State, and therefore the Municipal Courts had jurisdiction to entertain a suit by the representatives of the jagirdar against the Government for the possession of the land and for the value of the arms and stores. This was so, although, at the time of the resumption, the Regulation law was not introduced into the territories in which the jagir was comprised. FORRESTER v. SECRETARY OF STATE

4. ——— Confiscation of territories of King of Delhi—Forfeiture.—The status of the King of Delhi was that of a King recognized by the British Government; and the confiscation of his territories in 1857 was an act of State, and not an act done under color of any legal right of which a Municipal Court could take cognizance. His tenure of the territories assigned him by the Government was a tenure merely durante regno, and no power was conferred upon him of creating incumbrances which would survive his deposition. The word 'confiscation' does not necessarily import that the appropriation is to be made as a penalty for a crime, nor, when used in that sense, does it necessarily imply that the forfeiture has accrued upon conviction; but it may also be properly used as applicable to appropriations of property by Government as an act of State. SALIGRAM v. SECRETARY OF STATE

L. R., I. A., Sup. Vol., 119

5. ——— Confiscation by Governor of Foreign State—Title to timber.—The plaintiff brought a suit at Tonghoo in British Burma to recover possession of certain timber which he alleged the defendants had wrongfully, and in collusion with the Burmese Governor of Ninghan, taken out of his possession in foreign territory and removed to Tonghoo. The defendants stated that they had acquired the timber from the Governor of Ninghan in terms of an agreement between them and the Burmese Government. It appeared that the Governor of Ninghan had confiscated the plaintiff's timber in contravention of a royal mandate. After the institution of the suit, the defendants removed the timber from Tonghoo to Rangoon. Held that a British Municipal Court might enquire into the character of the act of the Governor of Ninghan, and was not bound to accept it as an act of State. BOMBAY-BURMAH TRADING CORPORATION v. MAHOMED AZI SHERAGEE . 10 B. L. R., 345: 19 W. R., 123

6. ——— Resumption by Government—Act of State—Jurisdiction of Civil Court.—By the treaty of the 31st July 1801 between the then Nawab of the Carnatic and the Governor in Council at Madras, the sovereign rights of the Nawab in the Carnatic were vested in the East India Company. Held that a resumption by the Madras Government of a jagir granted by former Nawabs, as Altamghah inam, before the date of the treaty and a re-grant by Madras Government to another for a life estate only, was such an act of sovereign power by the East India Company as precluded the Supreme Court at Madras from taking cognizance of a suit by the heirs of the original grantee in respect of such resumption. EAST INDIA COMPANY v. SYEDALLY . 7 Moore's I. A., 555

7. ——— Resumption of village granted by Peishwa of the Deccan.—A village, having been granted in inam by the Peishwa of the Deccan, was, after the death of the grantee, seized by the mamlatdar or farmer of the revenues for an alleged debt due to him, and retained until the treaty of Poona in 1818 when it came into the possession of the British Government. In a suit instituted by the representatives of the original grantee for possession of the village, and payment of the arrears of revenue so sequestered, it was held by the Judicial Committee, affirming the decree of the Provincial and

10. — Resumption of inam village and re-grant, Effect of—Waikars, Status of—Treaties of 1820—Effect of grant of inam under construction—Attachment by Government of such village, Effect of.—From the year 1820 down to the year 1872 the Waikar family had been in the enjoyment of the village of Pasarni under a treaty between the East India Company and one M. A. and K. M., who were brother and the last male descendants of M. For an alleged fraud of K. M. Government restricted the enjoyment of the said village to his lifetime only. A predeceased K. On the death of K. M. Government, on the 31st December 1872, placed an attachment over the village. On the 13th July 1874, a judgment-creditor of A caused the lands in dispute, which were miras lands of the Waikar family situated at Pasarni, to be sold in execution of his decree against A, and they were purchased by the defendant, who

The proceedings of Government in 1873 and 1876, by which the plaintiff was recognised as the representative of the Waikar family, were not acts of State. The status of the Waikars and other persons, with whom the agreements of 1820 were entered into, was not that of an independent sovereign. They

3. ——— Heirs-at-law under Mahomedan law opposing grant of probate—Right to bring administration suit pending probate proceedings—Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), s. 34.—The plaintiffs as heirs-at-law had entered caveat in an application by the executor for the probate of an alleged will of the deceased. The application was set down as a contentious cause, and the executor appointed administrator pendente lite. As heirs under Mahomedan law, the plaintiffs were entitled to two-thirds share in the property left by the deceased, even if the Will was not established. Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to maintain a suit for administration by the Court against the administrator pendente lite, even though the probate proceedings have not been determined. 4. ——— Suit by creditor—Misjoinder—Multifariousness—Practice.—The principle of the rules that the creditor of a deceased person suing for administration is in the same situation with regard to all other persons as if he were bringing an action at law against the administrator, and that a debtor to the estate of a deceased person can only be made answerable as such debtor by the representative of the deceased's estate, is to be adhered to in this country, where there is a different procedure. Therefore, where, to a suit brought against the Administrator-General as administrator of the estate of one W B by a creditor of the deceased, other persons who also had a claim against the estate were made defendants, on the allegation that they had realized and were in possession of assets of the estate of the deceased.—Held that, there being nothing to show that such persons were in the position of an executor or administrator de son tort, or that they had been partners with the deceased, or that they could not be sued, if necessary, by the legal representative himself, and there being no other circumstances which would make it equitable that they should be sued jointly with the legal representative, they were wrongly made parties, and the suit ought to be dismissed as against them for misjoinder. Even assuming the facts were such that the plaintiff was entitled to sue them as legal representatives of the estate, he should not mix his own claim with that which the Administrator-General might have against them. DHUNBAI v. 14. ——— Succession Act (X of 1865), s. 202—Estate of intestate Native Christian—Suit for partition of estate by purchaser of widow's share before completion of administration—Dismissal of suit—Only remedy by way of administration suit.—A person to whom the Indian Succession Act, 1865, applied having died intestate in April 1884, his widow and son were in September of the same year granted letters of administration, which were cancelled for want of stamp duty, a fresh grant being made on 19th January 1885. Plaintiff, alleging that the said widow had executed a promissory note in her favour in September 1884, filed a suit against her on 6th January 1885, and, there being no appearance of the defendant, obtained an ex-parte decree. In execution of the decree so obtained, plaintiff attached portions of the estate of the deceased and brought them to sale, becoming herself the purchaser of the one-third share of the widow in each lot sold. In March 1885 the son was appointed sole administrator; in January 1888 he died, and the letters of administration were revoked in consequence, and the amin of the District Court was appointed administrator of the estate until October 1894, when the son's widow was so appointed in his stead. Plaintiff now sued for partition of the property comprised in the estate of the deceased in order that she might obtain delivery of the portions of it which she had purchased in execution of the decree against the widow previously obtained as aforesaid. The estate of the deceased had never been administered or distributed. The defence was that the said previous decree had been obtained by fraud:—Held that, under s. 44 of the Indian Evidence Act, the defendants were entitled to set up this defence; and that, the property of the deceased having become vested in his administrator under the Indian Succession Act, it remained so vested until the administrator had distributed the estate, and that, in consequence, the widow had no saleable interest in any part of the estate until in the course of the administration thereof her share had been determined and allotted to her. Until such allotment (which had not yet taken place) the only process by which plaintiff could legally claim the widow's interest in the estate was by a suit for the administration of the estate, to which suit the widow, if alive, would be a necessary party. If not alive, letters of administration to her estate would be necessary, the administrator being made a party. Held, also, that the suit could not be treated, as an administration suit. *SRIRANGAMMAL v. legal representative of his deceased father. Previously to the date of the decree (viz., on 4th March 1898), an order had been made by the High Court under ss. 17 and 18 of the Administrator-General's Act (II of 1874), authorizing the Administrator-General to collect the assets of the deceased and ordering him, if necessary, to take out letters of administration to his estate. On the 29th April 1898, the plaintiff, under s. 268 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), attached certain money in the hands of a third party due to the deceased's estate. On the 2nd July 1898, letters of administration were granted to the Administrator-General. Held that, as against the Administrator-General, the attachment was void ab initio. At the date of the decree obtained by the plaintiff, the Administrator-General was entitled, by virtue of the High Court's order, to take possession of the estate of the deceased. As soon as that order was made, his right to possession became paramount, and excluded that of the defendant (the son of the deceased), who was then no longer entitled to recover payment of debts due to his father. A decree, therefore, subsequently obtained against the defendant could not, as against the Administrator-General, confer any rights on the decree-holder, who could not stand in a better position than the defendant, his judgment-debtor. Under ss. 278 and 280 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Administrator-General had the right to have the attachment removed, because he was exclusively entitled, at first by reason of the order under s. 18 of Act II of 1874 and subsequently by his letters of administration, to recover the debt, and was not subject to any decree which affected his title. *Lallchand Ramdayal v. The admission of assets for the payment of a debt is also an admission of assets for the purposes of the suit, and extends to assets if the Court thinks fit to give them. There is nothing in s. 35 of the Administrator-General's Act (II of 1874) which qualifies or restricts or otherwise interferes with the right of a creditor to demand immediate payment of his claim in full when the realizable assets in the hands of the Administrator-General are sufficient for the immediate payment of all claims in full. The "rateable payment" referred to in the above section as well as in s. 282 of the Succession Act (X of 1865), and in s. 104 of the Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), is rateable payment out of the assets; it is nowhere provided that it shall be made out of the net income of the estate or any other specific part of the assets. The language ("shall be liable to pay the debts") used in cl. 1 of s. 35 of the Administrator-General's Act (II of 1874) shows that it was intended not to impose upon a creditor, to

3. ——— s. 51—Continuance—"Collection of Arrears of Rent." Under s. 51 of Act II of 1874, the Administrator-General is entitled to charge a landlord on the estate and distribution of all assets. "Collection of assets" implies the direct of a suit in connection with such assets. Where part of the estate consisted of a fund of which the total estate created a paid law subject to payment of a fixed rent, and part of the fund had been acquired for public purposes, the court granted a decree for arrangements distributable between the estate and the landlord in certain proportions. Held that the Administrator-General was entitled to charge a landlord on the rents actually collected by him and on the amount applied to the estate, not as a lien on the corpus of the fund. IN THE ESTATE OF SHAMPOO, 1 Mch. 171, followed. *IN THE ESTATE OF CHANDER L. He now sued for the recovery of the property under an ekarnamah which did not stipulate for payment of interest. Held that the case put forward by plaintiff in the former suit did not amount to an admission that there was an agreement to pay 12 per cent., and that he was entitled to restoration of the property on payment of the principal alone. PROSUNNO COOMAR MOOKERJEE v. On her husband's death, S continued to reside with his brothers, and was supported out of the income of the joint estate. All the daughters married in the lifetime of S, and B became a widow without having had a child. After the death of S, and in the lifetime of M, N also became a childless widow. M died after her mother, leaving a son, R K. R K, on attaining majority, sued to recover, with mesne profits, a 4-anna share of the ancestral estates to which he claimed to be entitled on his mother's death as heir of R, and from which he alleged he had been dispossessed by the representatives of R's brothers, whom he made defendants in the suit, joining B and N with them as co-defendants. Some time after the institution of the suit, a petition was filed purporting to proceed from B and N, by which they admitted that the plaintiff was the heir of R, and that they had no defence to offer. Held that, N being the heir of R, R K had not, during her lifetime, any right to any part of the estate, and that his position was not altered by the petition purporting to proceed from B and N, such petition not amounting to a conveyance or disclaimer of title in his favour. In the English Common Law Courts, and, a fortiori, in the Courts of Law in India, where the pleadings are less technical, an admission of a fact on the pleadings by implication is not an admission for any other purpose than that of the particular issue, and is not tantamount to proof of the fact. An admission or even a confession of judgment by one of several defendants in a suit is no evidence against another defendant. AMIRTOLALL BOSE v. ROJONEEKANT MITTER. 15 B. L. R., 10

37. ——— Inheritance—Relinquishment—Admission on pleadings.—A plaintiff, suing two defendants M and L for the possession of certain property by right of inheritance, admitted in his plaint the right by inheritance of the defendant M to a moiety of the property, and only made him a defendant because he would not join in bringing the suit. The claim, however, was for the entire property. The defendant M filed a written statement setting forth that he had long ago willingly resigned all his rights in favour of the plaintiff, and that the suit had been instituted with his consent. Held that this statement was only an admission by M of the plaintiff's title, which could not be used against the other defendant L so as to entitle the plaintiff to a decree for the entire estate; that since L did not set up M's title to defeat the plaintiff, he could not be affected by M's disclaimer; and that the plaintiff could not be allowed in this suit to obtain M's share as his representative, for that would be to decree him the share on a title he never set up.

The third sister did not appear to defend the suit. Held that the Lower Courts were wrong in treating this admission as sufficient to entitle the plaintiffs to a decree for possession, not only of their own share, but also of the shares of their three sisters, it being a fundamental proposition connected with the administration of justice that a plaintiff cannot sue for more than his own right, and that no defendant can, by an admission or consent of this kind, convey the right or delegate the authority to sue for more than his own share in property. *Lachman Singh v. 3. MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

66. ——— Verbal admissions as to sum due by defendant.—It is a very dangerous thing for a Court to decree in favour of a plaintiff merely upon alleged verbal admissions by the defendant of a sum due without the most clear and cogent proof of such admissions, especially when the plaintiff shrinks from bringing his accounts into Court. *LALLA SHEOPRASHAD v. In the face of such admission, however, the party seeking to get out of its effects must make out his case by very clear evidence. MAHOMED HANEEF MEAJEE v. MOZHUR ALI . . . 15 W. R., 280

68. ——— Admission in a mortgage as to amount of land excepted from its operation.—Debutter land within the limits of a revenue-paying mouzah, which had been mortgaged by the defendants to a predecessor in title of the plaintiff, was exempted from the mortgage, the deed specifying the number of bighas making the area of the debutter. Against a plaintiff, who made title to the mortgaged mouzah and claimed possession of all of it that had passed by the mortgage, the mortgagors set up that there was more debutter in the mouzah than the deed had specified, the intention of the parties to the deed having been to exempt whatever debutter there actually was:—Held that the statement in the deed as to the quantity of the debutter was a deliberate admission, imposing upon the mortgagors who had made it the burden of proving that it was untrue, or that they were not bound by it; also that the Subordinate Judge's finding that the defendants had not given proof sufficient to discharge themselves of this, was correct. *JARAO KUMARI v. The evidence of marriage between D and P consisted of their statements that they were married to each other and of a statement by K that P was D's wife. K was convicted on the charge of adultery. Held that such evidence, having regard not only to s. 50 of the Evidence Act, 1872, but to the principle that strict proof should be required in all criminal cases, was not sufficient to establish the vital incident to the charge of adultery, namely, the marital relation of D and P. *Empress v. 8. ————— Sagai marriages—Custom of caste.—Sagai wives, i.e., widows married in accordance with the custom of Sagai prevailing amongst the Koiries and other low castes of Pchar, are so far the legal wives of their husbands as to justify the punishment of persons committing adultery with them. *BISSUBAM KOIRIE v. [3 C. L. R., 410]

9. ————— Proof of adultery—Sexual intercourse—Presumption of knowledge that woman is married.—In a case of adultery, sexual intercourse must be proved; the sexual intercourse required for adultery being the same identical thing as the sexual intercourse required for rape. The difference lies in the mode of proof: in rape, no presumption of sexual intercourse can be made; in adultery, it can be, evidence pointing strongly to an inference of guilt. It is not necessary, therefore, that there should be direct evidence of an act of adultery; nor that the adulterer should know whose wife the woman is, provided he knew she was a married woman. *QUEEN v. 12. ————— Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 497, 498—Condonation.—The complainant alleged that his father-in-law had detained his wife, and that with his help the accused married his wife, and since then had kept her in his house. The accused was convicted under s. 498, Penal Code. The Sessions Judge made a reference under s. 438, Criminal Procedure Code, to the effect that the conviction under s. 498, Penal Code, was bad, inasmuch as there was no evidence whatever to show that the petitioner enticed away the complainant's wife from her husband's or her father's house with intent to have illicit intercourse with her, and that there could not be any conviction under s. 497, Penal Code, as the circumstances of the case warranted the conclusion that the offence, if any, had been condoned by the husband by his omission to take any steps since the last six or seven years against the accused. The High Court agreed with the view of the Sessions Judge. JASINADDIN SHEIKH v. ICHOHAK MISTRY [1 C. W. N., 498]

Commissioner, who dismissed the suit in accordance with the Chief Commissioner's judgment. The plaintiff preferred an appeal to the Chief Commissioner from the Commissioner's decision. The Chief Commissioner did not make any order on the memorandum of appeal admitting it, or directing that it should be registered, or that the respondent should be summoned, or that the appellant should appear on a certain day under s. 551 of Act X of 1877, but issued a notice to the appellant's counsel to appear on a certain day. The appellant's counsel appeared on that day, and the Chief Commissioner intimated that he was acting under s. 551 of Act X of 1877. The appellant's counsel then proceeded to address the Chief Commissioner, and was heard for some time, and then stopped in consequence of the Chief Commissioner resolving to refer to the High Court the question whether the appeal from the Commissioner's decision lay to him or to Her Majesty in Council. The Chief Commissioner subsequently referred such question to the High Court. Held by the Full Bench (SPANKIE, J., dissenting), on a reference by the Division Bench before which the Chief Commissioner's reference came, that such question arose “in the trial of an appeal” within the meaning of s. 21 of the Ajmere Courts Regulation I of 1877, and was properly referred to the High Court. Held by the Division Bench (SPANKIE, J., and STRAIGHT, J.) that the appeal from the Commissioner's decision lay, in this particular case, not to the Chief Commissioner, but to Her Majesty in Council. THAKUR OF MASUDA v. 1. APPEAL NEWLY GIVEN BY LAW.

3. ———— Proceedings instituted prior to change in procedure—Appeal from order under s. 312, Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1852)—Act VII of 1858, ss. 55, 56.—It is a general principle of law that an appeal newly given by law is made applicable to proceedings instituted before that change in procedure is made. Held, accordingly, that an appeal from an order under the second paragraph of s. 312 of the Civil Procedure Code, although made before Act VII of 1858 came into force, would, upon the operation of that Act, lie to the Court to which an appeal would lie from the decree in the suit in relation to which such order was made. *Murranhari Debi v. This application was refused, and an appeal was thereupon preferred against the order of refusal. Held that no appeal would lie under Act X of 1877, and that, as there was at the time of that Act coming into operation, no proceeding on foot on the part of the appellant which could be saved by the operation of s. 6 of Act I of 1868, there was no remedy by way of appeal from the order under Act VIII of 1859. *Runjit Singh v. 84. ————— In a suit in the Munsif's Court seven issues were fixed for determination, and the suit was then referred by agreement to three arbitrators. In coming to an award the arbitrators took up specifically some of the issues framed in the Munsif's Court, and declined to enter into others. They determined the matter in issue between the parties, and the award was signed by the three arbitrators. Two of the arbitrators subjoined to the award a suggestion which, if acted on, would prevent the necessity of carrying out the award. The Munsif dealt with this suggestion as surplusage, and gave the plaintiff a decree in accordance with the award signed by the three arbitrators. In appeal it was contended that the award was not a legal one, and it was sought to set the decree of the Munsif aside; but the Judge found that the decree was in accordance with the award, and that he was precluded by s. 325 from disturbing the decision of the Munsif. On special appeal it was contended that the award was incomplete, as all the issues were not decided, and that the decree was not in accordance with the award, as it did not embody the suggestion of the two of the three arbitrators. Held that the decree was in accordance with the award, and was, therefore, final under s. 325. The mahajan applied to the Subordinate Judge of Bhagulpur, under Act VIII of 1869, s. 327, to file the award. The Subordinate Judge held that it was not proved that the gamasta had done as required by the award, and ordered him to pay the deficit. The gamasta appealed to the Judge, who held that no appeal lay from the judgment of the Subordinate Judge enforcing the award. Held, on special appeal, that the Subordinate Judge's judgment decided a question of fact not determined by the award, and that an appeal would lie. RAMDHANJAN BHUKT v. The plaintiffs then applied to the Subordinate Judge to have the award filed in Court under the provisions of s. 525 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The defendants came in and objected to the award on the following amongst other grounds:—(1) That the value of the property in suit was Rs500 only, and therefore that the application should have been made in the Munsif's Court and not in that of the Subordinate Judge; (2) that the agreement of submission was vague and indefinite, and did not clearly set out the matters in dispute. The Subordinate Judge overruled the objection without taking any evidence, and directed the award to be filed and a decree to be passed thereon. The plaintiff appealed. The arbitrators being unable to agree upon the matters referred, the Court, on the application of one of them, appointed an umpire, and directed that the award should be submitted on a particular date. An award was made by the umpire and one arbitrator, without the concurrence of the other arbitrator, and submitted to the Court, which passed a decree in accordance with its terms. On appeal by the defendants in the case, the District Judge reversed the decree. Held that an appeal would lie to the Judge from the decree of the first Court, where there had been no legal award such as the law contemplated. *Lachman Das v. Ten days after the petition of compromise was filed, the first defendant and the plaintiff presented petitions to the Court withdrawing from the compromise, and praying that the suit should proceed. C.), had been actually and in good faith receiving and enjoying rent before and up to the time of the commencement of the suit, is a decision upon the question whether the intervenor is entitled to collect rent; therefore it is a decision upon a question relating to a mere interest in land as between parties having conflicting claims thereto, and under s. 144, the appeal from the judgment of the Deputy Collector to the Judicial Commissioner. Held, further, that an appeal lay to the High Court from the judgment of the Judicial Commissioner, and therefore s. 622, Civil Procedure Code, did not apply. LALL BHUI SINGH v. 6. BOMBAY ACTS.

155. — Bombay Civil Courts Act (XIV of 1869), ss. 8 and 23—Suit for account and for balance that may be found due.—The plaintiffs sued for an account of all the business done by the defendants as their commission agents from 1854 to 1867, and prayed that whatever was found due might be awarded with interest. The plaintiffs valued the relief sought approximately at Rs 510, and this was the only valuation stated in the plaint. The suit was filed in the Court of a first class Subordinate Judge, who rejected the plaintiffs' claim. Against this decision the plaintiffs preferred an appeal to the High Court:—Held that, as the approximate amount of the claim was stated in the plaint to be Rs 510, that must be taken to be the value of the subject-matter of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction. The appeal, therefore, lay under ss. 8 and 26 of Act XIV of 1869, not to the High Court, but to the District Court. KRISHNA CHAND MUTHU CHAND v. NAGINDAS MUTHU CHAND

159. — Administration suit—Suit filed in second class Subordinate Judge's Court—Decree in such a suit—Appeal from such decree to District Court.—The plaintiff filed an administration suit in the Court of a Subordinate Judge of the second class, valuing the relief claimed at Rs 150. The Subordinate Judge found that the property in suit was worth over a lakh of rupees, that the liabilities came to Rs 720, and that the defendant was indebted to the estate in the sum of Rs 15,192. He drew up a preliminary decree, directing (inter alia) that the defendant should pay this amount into Court within two weeks. Against this order the defendant appealed to the District Court. The District Judge returned the appeal for presentation to the High Court on the ground that the subject-matter exceeded Rs 5,000. Held, reversing the order of the District Judge, that the appeal lay to the District Court. SHRI KAVAJI MANCHERJI v. The Court of first instance, finding that the claim to the former property was admitted and that to the latter was not denied, but resisted as barred by s. 13 of Act X of 1877, and holding it not to be so barred, made a decree returning the plaint to the plaintiffs that they might, after correcting it, file it either in the Revenue Court in regard to the profits of the former property or in the Civil Court for possession of the latter property. Held that, although the claim of the plaintiffs was not either decreed or dismissed, yet as the right and title asserted by them to such properties was implicitly recognised by such decree, the defendants were entitled to appeal from it. *BEHARI BHAGAT v. between themselves and X, whom the plaintiff represented, that such land was included in such garden, and that consequently their title to such land as owners could not be questioned in the present suit. The Court of first instance held that such land was not included in the defendants' garden, and they were not the owners of it, but that they could not be ejected from it, as they were in possession under the lease, which had not expired, and that the question whether such land was included in the defendants' garden, and they were the owners of it, was not res judicata. On appeal by the judgment-debtor, the Lower Appellate Court, on the 22nd September 1877, reversed such order. Held, per PRATON, J., on appeal by the decree-holder from the order of the Lower Appellate Court, that the Lower Appellate Court's order, being within the scope of the definition of "decree" in s. 2 of Act X of 1877, was appealable under s. 184 of that Act, as well as under Act VIII of 1859, notwithstanding its repeal in reference to s. 6 of Act I of 1868. 221. — Order directing accounts to be taken—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 2—Interlocutory order—In a suit for a share of the cost of a party wall built by the plaintiff, who, and also the defendant, were jointly owners of plots of land under the Government for building, portion of the agreement being that all disputes as to the cost and maintenance of party walls were to be settled by the Government Surveyor, to whom decision was to be final—the Judge, SCOTT, J., on 11th December 1882, decreed that the defendant was liable to pay half whatever sum the Government Surveyor might certify to be due for the cost, and that the defendant was entitled to set off, in the calculation of what was due from him, the cost of any work or materials which the Government Surveyor might find had been contributed by him; and the case was thereupon adjourned for the certificate of the Government Surveyor. The Government Surveyor subsequently gave his certificate as to the cost of the unused portion of the said wall, but stated that on the evidence before him he was unable to decide as to the ownership of the foundations, etc., of the wall. The case came on again before SCOTT, J., who decided to take evidence on the points left undetermined by the Government Surveyor. Witnesses were accordingly examined, and on 11th December 1883 the Court disallowed the defendant's claim of set-off, and gave judgment for the plaintiff for half the sum certified by the Government Surveyor as the cost of the disputed part of the wall. The defendants appealed. Held that the decree of the 11th December 1882 was not a decree or an "order directing accounts to be taken" within the meaning of s. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882), and that the defendants, although they had not filed an appeal against it within the period allowed by the Limitation Act, were entitled to appeal against it when appealing against the decree of 11th December 1883. COVERJI LEPDHA v. 232. ——— Order rejecting application under Civil Procedure Code, s. 44, rule (a), and returning plaintiff—Civil Procedure Code, s. 44, rule (a), and s. 2—"Decree."—No appeal lies under any of the provisions of s. 588 of the Civil Procedure Code from an order under s. 44, rule (a), rejecting an application for leave to join another cause of action with a suit for the recovery of immoveable property. In a plaint filed in the Court of a Subordinate Judge the plaintiff claimed to recover possession of a house, together with some grain which was stored in it. The plaintiff applied to the Subordinate Judge for leave, under s. 44, rule (a), of the Civil Procedure Code, to join the claim for grain with the claim for possession of the house.

The Subordinate Judge refused leave, and returned the plaint, with directions that the plaintiff should institute two suits for recovery of the house and the grain, respectively, in the Court of the Munsif. Held that the Subordinate Judge's order was substantially an order rejecting the plaint on the ground that the plaintiff had joined a cause of action with a suit for recovery of immoveable property; that although this might have been a misapplication of s. 44, rule (a), of the Code, its effect was to reject the plaint; that such an order was a decree with reference to the definition in s. 2, and was appealable as such to the District Judge; and that therefore a second appeal lay in the case to the High Court, and that Court was not competent to interfere in revision under s. 622. *BANDHAN SINGH v. Where those proceedings, however, were left to be taken in execution of the decree, the High Court, treating it as an error in point of form, and without deciding whether or not an objection, if it had been taken, would have been fatal to the proceedings, dealt with the case in the same way as was done in *Gyan Chunder Sen v. a decree of an Original Court dismissing a suit, and the Appellate Court sent the case back for the purpose of certain evidence being taken, and certified to it. Pending that being done, the parties applied to the Appellate Court to refer the case to arbitration, and that Court referred that application to the Original Court for disposal, although the case was still pending in its own file for disposal. Subsequently an application was made to the Original Court to refer the case to arbitration, and on the 10th May the case was sent to the arbitrator with directions to submit his award within seven days. On the 12th September, as the award had not been sent in, the Original Court passed an order recalling the award, and subsequently the award of the arbitrator, dated the 12th September, was filed. He then applied to the Court, under s. 103, for an order to set the dismissal aside, but his application was rejected. He thereupon preferred an appeal from the decree dismissing the suit under the provisions of s. 540. Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to appeal from the decree dismissing the suit, and that his only remedy was by way of an appeal under s. 588 (8) of the Code from the order rejecting the application to set the dismissal aside. *Lal Singh v. The Court refused to grant any adjournment, and dismissed the appeal for default:—Held that the order of dismissal was bad. The mere fact that the appellant's pleader was not prepared to proceed with the case would not enable the Court to deal with the case as if there was no appearance at all for the appellant, and to dismiss the appeal for default. Per BIRDWOOD, J.—An order dismissing an appeal for default is one falling within the definition of a "decree" contained in s. 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), and is, therefore,

Evidence adduced by the plaintiff was taken and a decree passed in plaintiff's favour as prayed. Some of the defendants applied to the District Munsif for an order to set aside the ex-parte decree, which application was refused; and the defendants then appealed against the original ex-parte decree, when the Subordinate Judge reversed the said decree and remanded the suit for re-trial de novo on the ground that the defendants had not had a proper opportunity for being heard. Held that it was not competent for the Subordinate Judge to pass such an order; that he could only deal with the case on the materials on the record; and that the decree of the District Munsif must be restored. *CAUSSANEL v. 325. — Order allowing mortgagor to deposit in Court amount due after date fixed—Ministerial act—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 244, 588.—S. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code contemplates that there must be some question in controversy and conflict in execution which has been brought to a final determination and conclusion so as to be binding upon the parties to the proceedings, and which must relate in terms to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of the decree. A judgment-debtor under a decree for foreclosure made an application to the Court two days after the expiry of time prescribed by the decree for payment of the amount due thereunder, in which she alleged that, by reason of the two previous days having been holidays, she had been unable to pay the money before, and asked to be allowed to deposit the same. Upon this application the Court passed the following order:—"Per-mission granted. Applicant may deposit the money." The money was deposited accordingly. Held that the order was merely a ministerial act, and nothing more than a direction from the Judge to his subordinate official to receive the money, which, as it did not fall within either s. 244 or s. 588 of the Civil Procedure Code, was not appealable; and that the proper remedy of the decree-holder, assuming the deposit to have not been made in time, was to apply for an order absolute for foreclosure, which order would be subject to any steps the parties affected by it might take by way of appeal or otherwise. *HULAS RAI v. One of the partners in the firm objected to the attachment on the ground that such property was not the property of the firm, but was his private property. 330. ——— Claim by legal representative to property as his own independently of deceased judgment-debtor—Separate suit—Jurisdiction—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 231, 244, 278 and 283.—Held by the Full Bench (TYNELL, J., dissenting): where a judgment-debtor dies after the passing of the decree, and his legal representatives are brought on the record in execution proceedings to represent him in respect of the decree, questions which they raise as to property which they say does not belong to his assets in their hands, and as such is not capable of being taken in execution, are questions which under s. 244 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code must be determined in the execution department, and not by separate suit. There is no distinction in this respect between the positions of legal representatives added to the suit before, and those added after, the decree. Under the last paragraph of s. 244, the Court executing the decree may try and determine the question whether property in the legal representative's hands formed part of the deceased judgment-debtor's estate, and find this fact for the purpose of bringing the property to sale in execution, and giving the auction-purchaser a good title under the sale; and the Court's order is subject to appeal, but not to a separate suit under s. 233. *SETH CHAND MAL v. 337. ——— Questions between execution-creditor and persons placed on the record as representative of deceased judgment-debtor—Civil Procedure Code (1882), ss. 244, 278, and 283.—Certain decree-holders obtained during the lifetime of their judgment-debtor attachment of certain immovable property as belonging to the said judgment-debtor; but, on the decree-holders seeking to bring the property to sale, one S D came forward with an objection that the property was his, and was not liable to sale in execution of the decree in question. Pending the decision of the Court on this objection, the decree-holders applied to the Court to have the names of S D and the widow of the judgment-debtor (who died about the time the previous objection was filed) placed on the record as representatives of the judgment-debtor. S D filed a similar objection to this application also; but both objections, being heard together on the 6th September 1892, were dismissed, and S D was placed on the record as representative of the deceased judgment-debtor. On appeal by S D against "the order of the District Judge of Jaunpur of the 6th September 1892," it was held that the order making S D a party to the execution proceedings as representative of the judgment-debtor rendered any order as to his former objection superfluous, and that order was appealable under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. *SHANKAR DAT DUBE v. AMIR BAKSHI SAHIB v. VENKATACHALA MUDALI [I. L. R., 18 Mad., 439]

353. — Purchaser, objection by—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 11—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss. 246, 247, 364.—Where the holder (G) of a simple money-decree, who is at the same time a mortgagee, applies to a Civil Court to sell mortgagor's property in execution of said decree, such property having previously been sold in execution of K's decree and purchased by N (G's claim upon it being at the same time notified), and in his (G's) application inserts the name of N, and calls him a judgment-debtor in the room of the heir and representative of the deceased debtor; and a purchaser comes in and denies that he is a judgment-debtor or liable, and asks for the release of the property, and the Judge disallowed his objection:—Held that, if the Judge's order was made after investigation, then, under s. 246 of Act VIII of 1859, an appeal was barred; if it was an order refusing to investigate the objection, then the appeal was barred either by s. 247 or by s. 364, unless allowed by s. 11, Act XXIII of 1861. Held, also, that the objector was not a party to the suit, and that he was not entitled to appeal under s. 11. S. 223, Code of Civil Procedure, can have no bearing on such a case. NARAIN ACHARJEE v. GREGORY

354. — Purchaser, Substitution of, for original party in record—"Party to suit."—A party who had sued, on the party of himself and of his minor brother, to recover possession of ancestral property alleged to have been alienated, sold his rights and interests in the suit to a third party, whose name was accordingly substituted in the place of plaintiff. Held that the substitution of such party for the plaintiff, in respect of part of the latter's share in the subject-matter of the suit, did not make that party a party to the suit, and gave him no status which would enable him to appeal. SAHER ROY v. CHOONEE SINGH. 9 W. R., 487

355. — Intervenor—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 11—Party to suit.—The first Court gave a decree to the plaintiff for possession of land against A, the original defendant in the suit, but exempted land in the possession of B, an intervenor, whom the Court had made a co-defendant. The Appellate Court reversed so much of that decree as adjudicated upon the claim as between the plaintiff and B and confirmed its decree for possession against A, but awarded costs against B. Held that B continued to be a defendant in the suit, and had a right of appeal under s. 11, Act XXIII of 1861, and that he was not as "a person other than the defendant" bound to come in under s. 230, Act VIII of 1859. *HUREE KISHORE ROY v. 1861, s. 11—Party to suit.—A female plaintiff obtained a decree against certain defendants, declaring certain ekarnamahs, etc., void as against her husband and his representatives. After his death she proceeded to execute the decree as one for possession, and obtained an order, under s. 223, Act VIII of 1859, for delivery of possession of property in the possession of a third party as being a person claiming under a title created by the defendants subsequently to the institution of the suit. The third party appealed from that order. Held that this was not a case in which an appeal lay under s. 11, Act XXIII of 1861, inasmuch as the questions raised by the appeal were not questions between the parties to the suit. *AMERBOONISSA KHATOON v. The judgment-debtors objected to the attachment and proposed sale on the ground that the house was their own private property and not the property of the debtor within the meaning of the decree, having been validly transferred to them during the debtor's lifetime. parties. Both before and after the mortgage the decree-holder received from the zamindar certain sums in consideration of his agreeing to postponements of the sale, also it was agreed between them at a date subsequent to the mortgage that interest should be computed at a higher rate than that provided by the decree. Subsequently the decree-holder sought to bring the land to sale, and in computing the amount then due gave credit for none of the sums so received, and calculated interest at the enhanced rate. The mortgagee objected that the computation was erroneous in both these respects, and the District Judge upheld his objection. The judgment-debtor took no part in the contest. Held that the mortgagee was a representative of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of the Civil Procedure Code, s. 244, and that an appeal lay against the order of the District Judge. *PARAMANANDA DAS v. The application was rejected. In execution of a decree against a judgment-debtor in his private capacity, the judgment-creditor attached certain property. wakf under a registered wakfnamah, and that he was only in possession as muttali under the deed. The lower Court found that the document created a valid wakf, and allowed the objection and released the property from attachment. The judgment-creditor appealed. At the hearing of the appeal it was contended that no appeal lay, because under the order was one under s. 281 of the Civil Procedure Code. On behalf of the judgment-creditor it was contended that the order was one under s. 244, and was thus appealable. Held that the order was one under s. 281, and that no appeal lay, the remedy of the judgment-creditor being by way of a regular suit, as provided by s. 281. *Roop Lall Dass v. 370. ——— Order on claim by trustee for release of trust property attached under personal decree against trustee—Civil Procedure Code (1882), ss. 244, 278 to 281.—Appeal from such order.—A decree-holder having attached certain property in the course of execution, two of the defendants in the suit in which the decree had been passed presented a petition praying that the property might be released from the attachment on the ground that it had been set apart for charitable purposes, and that it was held by defendants as trustees. The Subordinate Judge upheld the trust, and ordered the properties to be released from the attachment. Plaintiff then appealed to the High Court, when objection was taken that no appeal lay against the order of the Subordinate Judge. The Court referred to a Full Bench the question whether an appeal lies against an order passed with regard to a party to a suit against whom there is a personal decree, in respect of a claim he may set up to hold property, attached in execution of that decree, as a trustee on behalf of third persons not parties to the suit. Held that such a claim falls under s. 278, and not under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that no appeal lies against any order passed on it by the Court executing the decree. The claims of third parties, whether put forward by themselves or by a party to the suit, must be dealt with under ss. 278 to 281 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and not under s. 244. *Roop Lall Dass v. On a subsequent application made by the original decree-holder alone, the Court, while granting the application, directed that the proceeds arising from such execution should only be paid over to the co-decree-holders jointly. Held that the question in dispute being one between co-decree-holders, and not between parties to the suit or their representatives as contemplated by art. After the presentation of the plaint in another Court, and before the termination of the suit, the Collector applied to the Subordinate Judge for execution of the order as to costs, by seeking to recover the amount of the stamp duty from the plaintiff. The Subordinate Judge refused to execute the order, on the ground that the pauper suit was still pending in another Court. His order was affirmed by the District Judge on appeal. On second appeal to the High Court, Held that there was no appeal, and, therefore, no second appeal, under s. 244, cl. (c), of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), against the order of the Subordinate Judge refusing execution of the order as to costs, inasmuch as the question was not between the parties to the suit. *Collector of Ratnagiri v. partition, and, in taking steps to do so, stated the principle upon which he proposed to distribute the common land. An objection was then for the first time raised by two of the co-sharers in the Court of the Assistant Collector to the inclusion of a particular piece of land in the partition, on the ground that it appertained exclusively to their share. This objection was disallowed by the Assistant Collector and, on appeal, by the District Judge. Held that, at the stage of the proceedings when objections were taken, it was too late to determine questions of title under s. 113 of the Act; that accordingly the Assistant Collector could not be said to have done so; that the objections could, therefore, only be regarded in the light of objections to the mode in which it was proposed to make the partition; and that consequently there was no appeal from the order of the Assistant Collector to the District Judge, or from the District Judge to the High Court. *POTA RAM v. On the 24th July 1888, an application for review was filed with the Registrar. Various reasons prevented the two Judges from sitting together until the month of March 1889. On the 6th March the matter came up before them when a rule was issued, calling upon the respondents to show cause why a review should not be granted, and made returnable on the 26th March 1889. On that day one of the Judges had left India on furlough, and the rule was taken up, heard, and made absolute by the other of the two Judges sitting alone. Held that the order was not a judgment within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent; and that no appeal would lie therefrom, the order being final under s. 629 of the Code of Civil Procedure. *Bombay and Persia Steam Navigation Company v. In execution of this decree, the plaintiff caused certain property to be attached as belonging to the deceased. The defendants objected to the attachment on the ground that the property belonged to them. The Court executing the decree proceeded to investigate this objection, and finding that the property did not belong to the defendants, but to the deceased, disallowed it. Held that the proceedings upon such objection were taken under s. 281 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the order disallowing it was therefore not appealable. *AWADH KUARI v. such decree being the thing which by law is made appealable, and nothing else, that party has no right of appeal therefrom. If, in the judgment of which such decree is the formal expression, findings have been recorded upon some issues against that party, and he desires to have formal effect given to them by the decree, so as to allow of his filing objections thereto under s. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code or of appealing therefrom under s. 540, he must take steps under s. 206 to have the decree properly brought into conformity with the judgment, so that there may be matter on the face of it to show that something has been decided against him; but if he fails to take this course, the decree, though in general terms, will stand good as finally deciding the issues raised by the pleadings upon which the ultimate determination of the cause and the decree itself rested. The findings in a judgment upon matters which subsequently turn out to be immaterial to the grounds upon which a suit is finally disposed of, as to the plaintiff's right to any portion of the relief sought by him as declared by the decree, amount to no more than obiter dicta, and do not constitute a final decision of the kind contemplated by s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, also, that in the present case the Judge was right in holding that the question as to the validity or otherwise of the deed of endowment was wholly immaterial. The judgment of STRAIGHT, J., in Lachman Singh v. Mohan, I. L. R., 4 All., 497, approved and followed. Per OLFIELD, J., contra, that the decree, to agree with the judgment and fulfil the requirements of s. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code, should contain the material points for determination arising out of the claim and material for the decision thereon; that if this has not been done, the defect is a good ground of appeal, notwithstanding that the decree, on its face, may be altogether in favour of the appellant, and notwithstanding that he may not have applied for amendment of the decree under s. 206 or for review of judgment; and that, in the present case, the defect in the decree would afford a good ground of appeal. Per MAHMOOD, J., that, inasmuch as the provisions of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code relate as well to the trial of issues as to the trial of suits, and in the present case the validity or otherwise of the deed was a matter directly and substantially in issue between the parties, and was adjudicated upon, the finding of the first Court upon that issue was not a mere obiter dictum, but would be binding upon the defendant as res judicata notwithstanding the fact that the suit against her was dismissed on the ground that she held possession of the property in lien of dower; that whatever has the force of res judicata is necessarily appealable; that the word "from" as used in s. 540 or s. 584, and the expression "objection to the decree" in s. 561, refer not only to matters existing upon the face of the decree, but also to those which should have existed, but do not exist there; and that the defendant in the present case was aggrieved or injured by the omission in the decree of the first Court, and was therefore entitled to file objections to it, and, for the same reason, to appeal to the High Court from the decree of the lower

The Judge held it was not barred, and made an order remanding the case for trial on the other issues. It was objected that, the suit being for a sum less than Rs500 and of a nature cognizable by a Small Cause Court, no appeal lay against the order of remand. Held, following Collector of Bijnor v. Jafar Ali Khan, I. L. R., 3 All., 18, and Mahadev Narsingh v. Ragho Keshav, I. L. That Judge retired from office without trying the suit, and the District Judge directed his successor, who was not invested with Small Cause Court jurisdiction, to try it, and he did so. Held that it must be taken that the suit was transferred under s. 25 of the Civil Procedure Code to the Court of the Subordinate Judge; and that therefore, regard being had to the provisions of that section that the Court trying any suit withdrawn

Commissioner having taken the account and made his report, an order was made, on further directions, varying it in certain respects. Subsequently a final decree was passed, founded in part on the order on further directions. An appeal was filed against the final decree, in which objection was taken to the order on further directions. It was contended that no appeal having been filed against the order on further directions, as might have been done under s. 15 of the Letters Patent, so much of the appeal as arose out of that order had been barred by lapse of time. Held that the order passed on further directions was not appealable under Chapter XLI of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), and that it fell, therefore, under the concluding portion of s. 591 of the Civil Procedure Code, and any error in it might subsequently be set forth as a ground of appeal against the final decree. Per JENKINS, C.J.—Assuming that the order on further directions was a judgment within the meaning of s. 15 of the Letters Patent, and as such appealable, the contention of the respondent cannot prevail, as that would not deprive the appellants of their right to appeal under the Code. JAMSETJI DADABHOY BARIA v. 555. ——— Order made in the course of execution proceedings and not appealed against—Right to raise the question as to its propriety in the appeal against the final order.—A decree having in 1894 been passed in favour of the plaintiff in a suit against a number of defendants for the recovery of land with mesne profits, the amount of such mesne profits was ordered to be fixed in execution. In 1897, an order was passed declaring that all the defendants were liable jointly and severally for such mesne profits, which order was not appealed against. Later in the same year a Commissioner was appointed to ascertain the amount of the said mesne profits, and in due course a final order in execution was passed by the District Court. At the time when the last-mentioned order was passed, certain of the defendants desired to re-open the question of their joint liability, but were not permitted to do so. Held that, even assuming that the order declaring the defendants to be jointly and severally liable was one from which an appeal could have been preferred, as to which there might be some doubt, it was a determination of one of the questions which had to be determined before the particular application for execution could be finally disposed of; and the question of the propriety of the order was one that need not be at once raised by appeal, but could be raised in the appeal against the final order. *Caussanel v. This application was made within six months of the death of the original plaintiff. The Court of first instance rejected the application, which the defendant opposed on the ground that the boy had not been adopted, and dismissed the suit on the ground that it had abated. Held that appeals lay against the rejection of the above application, and also against the dismissal of the suit. Per Curiam.—A dispute within the meaning of Civil Procedure Code, s. 367, need not be between persons claiming to represent the deceased plaintiff. *SUBHAYYA v. A died, and by a subsequent order B was appointed receiver. 605. ——— Order confirming sale before time for filing objections has expired—Appeal from order—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 311, 312—Objection to sale—Legal disability.—Although s. 312 of the Civil Procedure Code contemplates that objections to a sale under s. 311 shall be filed before an order for confirmation is passed, if the precipitate action of the Court has led to the confirmation of a sale before the time allowed for filing objection to the sale has expired, whether or not that Court could entertain such objections after confirming the sale, the High Court on appeal is bound to interfere, and to see that objections which by law the appellant is empowered to make are heard and determined before a sale of his property is confirmed or becomes absolute. An application under s. 311 of the Civil Procedure Code, on behalf of a judgment-debtor who was a minor, was rejected on the ground that the applicant did not legally represent the minor, and the Court thereupon confirmed the sale. A second application to the same effect was then filed on behalf of the minor by his guardian, and was rejected on the ground that the Court had already confirmed the sale, and was precluded from entertaining objections after such confirmation, prior to which no proper application had been filed. From this order the judgment-debtor appealed. Held that the appeal must be considered to be one from an order under the first paragraph of s. 312 of the Civil Procedure Code, confirming the sale after disallowing the appellant's objection, and that it would, therefore, lie. The order disallowing the application and the order confirming the sale were set aside and the case remanded for disposal of the appellant's objections. BALDEO SINGH v. KISHAN LAL . . . I. L. to them. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit on the ground that the fruit on such tree had not been removed, but found incidentally that such tree belonged to the plaintiff. The plaintiff appealed from the decree of the Court of first instance, and the defendants objected to the decree, contending that such tree belonged to them. Held that, inasmuch as the Court of first instance did not, in deciding that such tree belonged to the plaintiff, decide a question substantially in issue, it did not decide in this matter "against the defendants" within the meaning of s. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code, and as the decree was limited to dismissing the suit, the defendants as respondents were not qualified to take an objection which they could not have taken by way of appeal, and therefore the Appellate Court was not warranted by law in entertaining the objection taken by the defendants. *BALAK TEWARI v. C and other defendants appealed against this decree so far as it awarded costs against them, making A and D respondents to the appeal. Under s. 561, D objected to that part of the decree which awarded possession of the land to A. Held on appeal that it was open to D, although improperly made a party to the appeal by C against A, to take objection to the rest of the decree. TIMMAYA MADA v. LAKSHMANA BHAKTA [I. L. R., 7 Mad., 215]

648. — Objections on appeal as to costs—Procedure—Notice of objections.—The Court of first instance found for the defendants on the merits, and passed a decree in their favour without costs. The defendants appealed against that part of the decree which disallowed them their costs. The plaintiff filed a notice of objections to the decree on the merits as required by s. 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure (XIV of 1882). The lower Court of Appeal varied the decree by allowing the defendants their costs of suit, and held that the plaintiff was not entitled to file any objections. Held that the Court of Appeal was in error in holding that the plaintiff's objections could not be entertained. S. 561 of the Code gives the respondent the power of taking any objection to the decree at the hearing of an appeal which he could have taken by way of appeal, provided he has filed a notice of his objections not less than seven days before the date fixed for the hearing of the appeal; and this power is independent of whether an appeal lies on a mere question of costs. *KAMAT v. 651. — Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 348.—A respondent, making a cross-appeal, can take objection to any part of the judgment of the first Court adverse to him to which the appellant can answer, and which affects the appellant's interests only; but the cross-appeal of a respondent does not open up any question between himself and his co-respondents, for they cannot be allowed to interplead. The law gives a respondent a right to raise objections at the hearing of the appeal; but under s. 348, Civil Procedure Code, reasonably construed, the contest is between two parties equally interested, and not with third parties. MAHBOOB ALI v. ZUR BANOO BIBEE . . . 9 W. R., 78

652. — Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 348.—Plaintiff sued two tenants and his co-sharer for joint rents. His suit was dismissed, and the dakhilas produced by the tenant defendants were declared to be false. The latter appealed, making the former and his co-sharer respondents. Plaintiff then appeared and made a cross-appeal under s. 348, Act VIII of 1859. Held that plaintiff had no locus standi to entitle him to make a cross-appeal against his co-sharer upon the appeal of the tenant defendants. ANUNTO DOSS SEIN v. RAM JOY SEIN . . . 11 W. R., 435

653. — Whether a respondent can prefer a cross-objection against another respondent—Civil Procedure Code (1882), s. 561.—In a suit for possession of land the Court of first instance decreed the plaintiff's suit in part against the defendants. Some of the defendants appealed to the High Court without making the other defendants party-respondents. The plaintiffs preferred a cross-objection under s. 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The non-appealing defendants were added as respondents by an order of the High Court to the effect that they might be made parties without prejudice to any objection that might be urged on their behalf at the hearing of the appeal. The non-appealing defendants at the hearing of the appeal contended that they were wrongly made parties, and that the plaintiffs could not urge their cross-objection as against them. Held that, as a general rule, the right of a respondent to urge cross-objections should be limited to his urging them against the appellant, and it is only by way of exception to this general rule that one respondent may urge a cross-objection against another respondent, the exception holding good, among other cases, in those in which the appeal of some of the parties opens out questions which cannot be disposed of completely without matters being allowed to be opened up as between co-respondents; but as there was nothing exceptional in this case, the plaintiffs were not allowed to urge their cross-objections against the first instance, as an alternative. In a suit between the widows of two brothers deceased, the plaintiff's title rested on this, that her and the defendant's late husbands, respectively, having been the sons of the same father, had, therefore, been sapindas to each other, so that the plaintiff as the widow of the one would be the heir of the other, expectant on the death of his widow. In this character she sued to have set aside an adoption made by the defendant. The Courts, however, found that the plaintiff's husband was an illegitimate son, and not a sapinda, and the suit was dismissed. The plaintiff, now appellant, on findings of fact that both the sons were illegitimate, urged that, though they could not inherit from their father, they yet could succeed to the estate of one another. Held that this contention was so inconsistent with the case made below that it was now inadmissible. Srimati Dasi v. Lalaumani, 2 B. L. R., P. C., 64; 11 W. R., P. Linga Reddi*, I. L. R., 3 Mad., 1, referred to. When an appeal is dismissed under s. 551 of the Civil Procedure Code, or, in the case of a second appeal, when the decree is one of dismissal, the effect practically is to make the decree which is confirmed the final decree to be executed in the suit; and the High Court making such order has power to amend the decree of the lower Court which has been in effect confirmed by it, so as to bring it in conformity with the judgment, which is also confirmed. *UMA SUNDARI DEVI v. 78. ——— Power of Appellate Court to dispose of appeal in absence of the appellant.—Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 420, 421, 422, and 423.—Appeal preferred by appellant in jail.—Where an appeal, preferred under s. 420 of the Criminal Procedure Code, has been admitted by the Appellate Court, and notice has been properly given under s. 422, and the record of the case has been sent for and perused under s. 423, the Appellate Court is competent, under the last-mentioned section, to dispose of the appeal, though the appellant is not present and is not represented by a pleader. The only limitation placed by s. 423 on the powers of the Appellate Court is that the Court, before disposing of the appeal, must peruse the record, and, if the appellant is present or is represented by a pleader, the appellant in person must be heard, or the pleader must be heard. So held by the Full Bench (MAHMOOD, J., dissenting). Held by MAHMOOD, J., contra, that the principles of audi alteram partem and ubi jus ibi remedium, and the provisions of s. 423 of the Code, as to notice of appeal, imply that, where an appeal is admitted and not summarily rejected under s. 421, the appellant must have a real opportunity of being heard; that in the passage in s. 423, "after perusing the record and hearing the appellant or his pleader if he appears," the word "he" refers to the pleader, and must not be read as "either of them"; that, in any case, the words "if he appears" make it a condition precedent to the disposal of an appeal under the section that the appellant is heard, or at least has the choice of appearing; that the word "appears" refers to the personal appearance of the appellant; and that an appeal which has been admitted cannot be disposed of unless the appellant is before the Appellate Court, or can be heard within the meaning of s. 423. Scoble, per MAHMOOD, J., but the High Court in appeal is competent to send for a criminal to appear before it to explain a difficulty in his case. QUEEN-EXPRESS v. Attorney-General of New South Wales, L. R. (1894) A. C., 57, referred to. S. 537 of the Code of Criminal Procedure does not warrant an Appeal Court, in a case where there has been misdirection in a charge to a jury, going into the evidence with a view to decide whether there is sufficient evidence to justify a conviction. Under s. 413, an appeal in a case tried by a jury lies on matters of law only, and the Appeal Court has no power to try the accused on matters of fact. The word "erroneous" in cl. (d) of s. 423 must not be read as "wrong on the facts," but must be read in connection with the words that follow as meaning that the verdict has been vitiated and rendered bad or defective by reason of a misdirection or a misunderstanding of the law. *WATADAR KHAN v. and a new trial under the same section was directed by the Sessions Judge. It was contended that the power to order a new trial under s. 423, cl. (b), of the Criminal Procedure Code could only be exercised when the conviction and sentence were set aside for want of jurisdiction in the trying Magistrate. Held that there is nothing in s. 423, cl. (b), of the Code of.—Presumption.—Per WHITE, J.—The sound rule to apply in trying a criminal appeal where questions of fact are in issue is to consider whether the conan Appellate Court in criminal cases is not similar to that of an Appellate Court in civil cases. In the latter case the Court must be satisfied before setting aside an order of the lower Court that the order is wrong. Protan Chunder Mukerjee v. Empress, 11

No provision was made for an appeal from the Governor's decision. In pursuance of the power conferred by this Act, the Government agent at Surat, to whom the matter was referred, made an award distributing the estate in certain shares among the heirs of the deceased, which award was confirmed by the Governor in Council. and the sale set aside, and an application by the auction-purchaser for the cancelment of the order setting aside the sale was refused. Thereupon the purchaser applied by petition to the High Court, praying that the order made on review might be reversed. In his petition he submitted that "the sale ought to have been confirmed" when the application of the judgment-debtor to have it set aside was first rejected, but the petition did not contain a formal prayer for confirmation of the sale. A rule, however, was granted, calling on the judgment-debtor to show cause why the order reversing the sale should not be set aside and the sale confirmed; which rule, after argument, was made absolute. The judgment-debtor having obtained leave to appeal to the Privy Council from the order making the rule absolute, the purchaser objected that such order was not appealable under cl. 39 of the Letters Patent, 1865, on the ground that it was not an order "made on appeal." Held that, as the purchaser had obtained a rule calling on the judgment-debtor to show cause why the sale should not be confirmed, and had allowed that rule to be made absolute, he could not contend that the order making the rule absolute was not an order made on appeal. Semle—Orders made by the High Court under s. 15 of 24 & 25 Vict., c. 104, are subject to appeal to the Privy Council. *HURDEO NARAIN SAHU v. On the ground that a decree for an account was not final within that section, the High Court refused, under s. 601, to grant the defendant a certificate. On his application for special leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council, not by way of an appeal from the local Court's refusal, but asking for the exercise of the prerogative right to admit an appeal:—Held that, as leave could be granted on any other ground, should any appear, besides the ground that the Court had refused the certificate without good cause, while leave could also be granted on the latter ground, if established, to make this application was, perhaps, more convenient than to appeal from the order of refusal. Held, also, that the real question in this suit having been the liability of the defendant to account to the plaintiff upon several claims, the decree had decided this against the defendant in such a way that, although the account had not been taken, the decree was final within s. 495. RAHIMBHAY HADIMBHAY v. Per RANADE, J.—There is a distinction between the confirmation of a decree and the affirmation of the decision and findings of the Courts of first instance by the High Court. The substantial question of law referred to in s. 596 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) need not directly arise out of the concurrent findings of fact, but it is enough if it is involved in those findings, and can, if the appeal is allowed, be raised in the course of the argument. In England the jury would find the facts and the Judge would draw the inference from the findings of the jury, but where, as in India, the case is tried without a jury, there is only a question of fact to be determined by one and the same person. Admiralty Rules.—By rule 35 of the rules respecting appeals from the Vice-Admiralty Courts abroad, made and ordained by King William IV in Council, in pursuance of the Statute 2 Will. IV, in c. 51, all appeals from the decrees of Vice-Admiralty Courts are to be asserted within fifteen days after the date of the decree. Held that the words "after the date of the decree" mean after the date when the decree is pronounced by the Admiralty or Vice-Admiralty Court, as the case may be, not the date when the decree is reduced to writing and signed. On the 23rd July 1880, the High Court in its Appellate Jurisdiction, modifying a decree of the High Court as a Court of Vice-Admiralty in a cause of damage by collision, referred it to the Registrar to assess the damages that had been incurred in reference to one of the ships, both of which were held to be in fault. The parties went, without protest, before the Registrar for that purpose, the impugnants also having taken out process to compel the appearance of the promovents before him, and the damages were assessed with the consent of both parties at a certain amount. On the 2nd September 1880, a notice of appeal was given on behalf of the impugnants, and was recorded as asserted pursuant to rule 35 above referred to. Held that the appeal was not within time, more than fifteen days having elapsed after the decree before the appeal was asserted. According to the law laid down in the Vice-Admiralty Courts, the proceedings taken before the Registrar were themselves sufficient also to prevent an appeal as of right. *THE OWNERS OF THE SHIP "BRENNIDA" v. The offices of the Court the Benches did not begin to sit till the 16th November. On the last-mentioned date, the petitioner brought in the money, and it was refused by the officer of the Court as being too late. Held that it was rightly refused, and that the Court had no power to grant permission to deposit it after the prescribed time. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF LALLA GOPER CHUND. Dismissal of appeal for default in deposit of security and in transcribing record—Act VI of 1874, ss. 11, 14, and 15.—On an application to stay proceedings in an appeal to the Privy Council, which had been presented on the 2nd July 1874 from a decision of the High Court on its Original Side, it appeared that no deposit had been made by the appellant to defray the costs of transcribing, etc., as provided by s. 11, Act VI of 1874; and that no steps had been taken to prosecute the appeal; and that no security had been deposited for the costs of the respondent since the petition of appeal was presented. The Court granted a rule calling on the appellant to show cause why the proceedings on the appeal should not be stayed, and, on his not appearing to show cause, ordered that the appeal should be struck off the file. *THAKOOR KAPILNATH SAHAI v. 69. Failure to give security—Power to enlarge time—Act VI of 1874, ss. 5 and 11.—An intending appellant to the Privy Council, who held a certificate under Act VI of 1874, s. 5, having failed to give the requisite security and deposit within the six weeks prescribed by s. 11, an order was passed to strike off his application to appeal. As, however, the defendant in the appeal, below, who would have been respondent in the appeal, had filed an appeal under the Letters Patent, s. 15, against the grant of the certificate, the applicant contended that the six weeks would not begin to run until such appeal was finally disposed of. Held that there was no ground for this contention, as the appeal did not operate as a stay of proceedings, nor remove the record to any other Court. Held that the Court had no jurisdiction to enlarge the time specified in s. 11. *FUNEENDRO DEB ROY KUT v. XVI of 1797, s. 4.—Within six months after decree and prior to the admission of an appeal therefrom to England, the Sudder Court, on an ex-parte application without notice, issued an execution order putting the decree-holder in possession. This was done without calling for security as provided by s. 4, Bengal Regulation XVI of 1797. The appellant, on the admission of the appeal, applied to the Sudder Court for security from the party in possession pending the appeal, but that Court held that, as the decree-holder was in possession under an execution order which could not be appealed from, they had no power to interfere. On petition the Judicial Committee, under the circumstances and on affidavit of waste, made an order declaring that it was competent to the Sudder Court to require security to be given for protection of the property pending the appeal, notwithstanding execution of the decree had issued, and gave permission to the appellant to apply to the Sudder Court with an intimation of that opinion. *JARIUTOOL BUTOOL v. Although, as a general rule, the High Court will take security, under s. 4, Regulation XVI of 1797, before allowing execution of a decree while there is an appeal to the Privy Council pending, yet the Court may, under certain circumstances, allow execution without taking security. Where the lower Court is informed that there has been an appeal to Her Majesty in Council from the decree which it is asked to execute, the lower Court should, in the exercise of its discretion, allow time to the parties to apply to the High Court to stay execution or to require security from the party left in possession, before issuing execution, unless it should see danger of the property being made away with in the interval. Loch, J., differed. *Wise v. that security be given for the mesne profits and the due delivery of the property without waste in the event of the appeal being successful. 1. GENERAL DUTY OF APPELLATE COURTS.

1. ——— High Court, Practice of—Appeal on questions of fact—Credibility of witnesses.—The High Court, sitting in appeal on questions of fact, was guided by the same rules as those of the Privy Council when they sat upon motions for a rule for new trials from the old Supreme Court. The High Court, sitting in appeal, will not disturb a judgment upon a question as to the credibility of witnesses, unless it be manifestly clear, from the probabilities attached to certain circumstances in the case, that the Court was wrong in the conclusion drawn from such evidence. The High Court, sitting in appeal, will look upon the decree of a Judge as to facts in the same light as the verdict of a jury; and, though some of the reasons given for the conclusion arrived at be erroneous, the High Court in appeal will not say that the decree is against the weight of evidence, if sufficient reason for such decree still remain. HEERALALL CHUCKERNUTTY v. MOHESU CHUNDER GHOSAL 1 Hyde, 105

2. ——— Privy Council, Practice of—Appeal on questions of fact.—The rule of the Privy Council not to disturb a judgment of a Court in India upon a question of fact, unless it is clear from the probabilities of the case that the judgment is wrong, however necessary as regards a Court of Appeal far removed from India, would hardly be extended as one equally necessary and applicable with the same strictness to a Court of Appeal in India. SARODA SOONDERY v. TINCOWRY NUNDY

He has to deal with the decision of a properly constituted Court, which, if not shown to be erroneous, ought to be affirmed. SURENDEB BISWAS v. MOLANDEB MONDAL. 25 W. R., 30

9. ——— Dealing with documentary evidence.—Where a Munsif pronounces an opinion as to the authenticity of certain documents, the lower Appellate Court must assume that he did his duty and looked into each and every one of them before pronouncing such opinion. On a question of simple credit to be given to a witness, an Appellate Court, having before it merely written depositions, is not authorized to set aside the opinion of the Court of first instance which heard the witness and recorded that his demeanour was not satisfactory. GURU NATH MOOKERJEE v. The Court directed the first Court to examine the defendant's witnesses, and, having done so, to return their depositions to the lower Appellate Court, which was to replace the appeal upon its file and dispose of it. KURBA BAKSH v. IMAM ALI SUKH. 1 L. R., 9 All., 330

14. ——— Duty of Appellate Court to call the remaining witnesses before reversing the decree of first Court—Dismissal of case in first Court without hearing all the witnesses—The Subordinate Judge, having heard all the witnesses for the plaintiff and some of the witnesses for the defendant, intimated that he did not consider it necessary for the defendant to call any more evidence. He then dismissed the suit. On appeal by the plaintiff, the Judge, upon the recorded evidence, reversed the decree, and allowed the plaintiff's claim. The

(a) GENERAL CASES.

15. — Discretion, Exercise of—
Discretion capriciously exercised—Error of law.—The discretion vested in a Court of Justice must be exercised in a sound and reasonable manner, and a capricious and unreasonable exercise of discretion on the part of a Court of first instance is an error in law which it is the duty of an Appellate Court to correct. PENDSE v. MAISE . . . 3 Bom., A. C., 94

16. — Appellate Court's power to interfere with exercise of discretion.—When an appeal against an order based on facts is given from a subordinate to a superior Court, the discretion vested in the former is absorbed in the latter, and it is the duty of the superior Court to weigh the facts which form the basis upon which the subordinate Court proceeds and arrive at its own independent conclusion: and this is so notwithstanding that the subordinate Court exercised its discretion after a proper enquiry and due consideration of the facts put before it, and not capriciously or with prejudice. KIRANI AHMEDULA v. SUBADHAT

17. — Costs — Miscarriage or mistake.—An Appellate Court will not interfere with the discretion of a lower Court as to costs, unless satisfied that there has been some miscarriage or mistake. LUCHMUN RAM UNOOR v. WATSON . . . W. R., 1864, 146

due consideration; has exercised the discretion in a sound and reasonable manner, the High Court will not interfere with the conclusion arrived at, even though it would itself have arrived at a different conclusion. Consequently, where a District Judge, after due enquiry, refused to admit an appeal presented after the time prescribed by the Statute of Limitations, the High Court would not interfere with his order. RANOHODJI v. LALLU

[I. L. R., 6 Bom., 304]

20. — Question of limitation—
Appeal.—B sued M and T for money due on a bond, and on the 27th April 1877 obtained a decree against T, the suit against M being dismissed. T applied for a review of judgment, and B also made a similar application. On the 25th May 1877 T's application was granted, and on the 16th July 1877 B's was rejected. On the 29th June 1878, the Court re-heard the suit against T, and dismissed it. B appealed, making T and M respondents, and impugning in his memorandum of appeal the decree of the 27th April 1877 as well as that of the 29th June 1878. The Appellate Court, assuming that the appeal was one from the decree of the 27th April 1877, preferred beyond time, admitted it after time, and after hearing the case on its merits, gave a decree against M, and dismissed the suit as regards T. Held that the Appellate Court erred in assuming that the appeal was from the decree of the 27th April 1877, and that it was at liberty to admit it beyond time, the appeal being from the decree of the 29th June 1878, that decree being the one which had brought B before that Court as an appellant; and that the Appellate Court was not competent, on an appeal from the decree of the 29th June 1878, to reconsider the merits of the case against M, the appeal from the decree of the 27th April 1877 being barred by limitation, and that decree and the decree of the 29th June 1878 being separate and distinct, and not appealable in one memorandum of appeal from the latter decree. (b) SPECIAL CASES.

22. — Analogous cases—Joinder of causes—Cases in which evidence is similar.—A number of cases having been instituted against the same defendant, and relating to the same matter, the plaintiff in one of them applied to both the lower Courts to have them all tried together, pointing out particularly that the documentary evidence in one of the other cases was necessary, and should be made use of in the trial of his case. This application was refused by the first Court, and the lower Appellate Court decided the case of the applicant upon evidence recorded with it, and disposed of the others as governed

The hundi was not stamped when drawn. Objection taken to its admission in evidence by defendant was allowed by the Munsif, but plaintiff was permitted to sue for the amount due upon the original consideration. The suit was dismissed on the ground that no consideration was proved. Upon appeal the District Judge held that the hundi did not require a stamp, as it was not intended to operate in British India, and admitted the hundi in evidence as a business letter admitting responsibility, and found that there was consideration. Held, upon second appeal, that the hundi having been admitted in evidence, though contrary to law, by the District Judge, no objection could be taken to the decree in second appeal upon that account. RAMASAMI v. The application was insufficiently stamped, and the Munsarim endorsed on it "stamp insufficient." On this a dispute ensued between the pleader for the applicant and the Munsarim as to the sufficiency of the stamp. On the 25th April 1889, the deficiency pointed out by the Munsarim was made good. On the 26th May the Judge admitted the application, on the applicant paying the Court-fee payable on an application presented on or after ninety days from the date of the decree.

The defendant objected that the khatas were not duly stamped. The Subordinate Judge held that the instruments were bonds, and as such admitted them in evidence on payment of the proper stamp duty and penalty under s. 34, proviso I, of the Stamp Act (I of 1879). At a subsequent stage of the same suit, his successor in office was of opinion that the khatas in question were promissory notes; that as such they could be stamped only at the date of their execution, and that they had been illegally admitted in evidence under s. 34, proviso I. He accordingly dismissed the District Judge agreed with the Subordinate Judge that the instruments sued on were promissory notes, but held that, after they had once been admitted in evidence on payment of the stamp duty and penalty, the question of their admissibility could not be subsequently raised in the suit under proviso III to s. 34 of the Stamp Act (I of 1879). He therefore reversed the decree of the Subordinate Judge, and remanded the case for trial on the merits. Against this order of remand defendants appealed to the High Court. Held that the promissory notes, having been once admitted in evidence, could not afterwards be rejected on the ground of their not being duly stamped. DEVA CHAND v. HIRA CHAND KAMARAT

The powers conferred by s. 28 of the Court Fees Act cannot be exercised by an order passed after the decision of the case to which the question of the payment of Court-fees relates, and, even assuming that they can be so exercised, such an order, though it may be subject to such rules as to appeal or revision as the law may provide, cannot be given effect to by making insertions in an antecedent decree. Per OLDFIELD, J.—That the Court had power

151. — Misjoinder of causes of action—Property wrongly attached—Joint suit by holders of two shares to have their shares declared not liable to attachment—Civil Procedure Code, s. 578—Amendment of plaint.—A decree-holder, in execution of a decree against one G L, attached a house as belonging to G L and his two sons forming a joint Hindu family. The sons objected that the house had previously been partitioned, and was held by them and their father in separate shares, but their objection was disallowed. They then brought a joint suit for a declaration that their respective portions of the house were not liable to attachment in execution of a decree against their father. No objection was taken to the frame of that suit, and the Court of first instance gave the plaintiffs a decree on the finding that partition had in fact taken place prior to the suit in which the defendant, judgment-creditor, had obtained his decree. On appeal by the judgment-creditor, the lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit entirely on the grounds of misjoinder of causes of action. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court. Held, on these facts, that the plaintiffs should have been allowed to amend their plaint by striking out the name of one of them, and that, though there was irregularity in the procedure, such irregularity did not affect the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court within the meaning of s. 578 of the Code of Civil Procedure. *BEHARI LAL v. The first Court gave the plaintiff a decree, and this decree was affirmed on appeal by the District Judge, who, however, gave no reasons of his own for his judgment, but merely adapted those of the lower Court. Held that, having regard to the nature of the case and the simplicity of the point for determination, the fact of the District Judge having omitted to state his reasons did not amount to such an error of law within the meaning of s. 578 of the Code of Civil Procedure as affected the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court. ROHIMONT DASI v. If the Political Agent was not properly representing the Chief, he had no locus standi against the defendants. The District Judge was, therefore, right in reversing the decree of the first Court.—s. 378 of the Code of Civil Procedure leaves no application to the present case. VENKATRAY RAO GHOSWAMI v. Code (1882), ss. 234, 248, and 578—Application by decree-holder for execution of decree by substitution on death of the judgment-debtor to the Court where the decree has been transferred.—A decree was transferred to another Court for execution. Pending the proceedings, one of the judgment-debtors died. On an application to that Court by the judgment-creditor to execute the decree against the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor, a notice was issued under s. 248 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The legal representative objected that the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the application, and that the application should have been made under s. 234 of the Code to the Court that passed the decree. Held that, even assuming that an application under s. 234 to the Court which passed the decree was a necessary preliminary to proceedings under s. 248 by the Court executing the decree, the omission to make it was only an irregularity which did not affect the merits of the case, and, under s. 578, the order of the Court of first instance should not have been reversed on account of such irregularity. *SHAM LAL PAL v. Life.—When the decree of a subordinate Court is under appeal to the High Court, it is open to the High Court to vary it either in points in which it is erroneous or in respect of matters occurring subsequently to the date of such decree which are admitted. The plaintiff obtained a decree in a partition suit in the Subordinate Judge's Court for his share in certain joint family property in the possession of the defendants (his co-parceners). The decree was affirmed on appeal. The defendants filed a second appeal in the High Court, but, before it was decided, one of the defendants died. The plaintiff at the hearing of the second appeal claimed a larger share in the family property than he had been awarded by the decree of the Courts below. Held that he (plaintiff) was entitled to a share in that of the co-parcener who died pendente lite, and that the decree appealed from ought to be varied accordingly. *SANKARAN MAHADEV DANGE v. This was modified on appeal by the declaration that "the defendants are patnidars of the same mouzahs." Held that it was unnecessary on this appeal to consider whether the Appellate Court was right in its conclusion that the defendants were patnidars; because, upon the case which had been set up for the defendants, and upon the issues framed and tried in the lower Court, the Appellate Court could not properly make such a declaration: the defendants could not be in a better position than they would have been in had they claimed to be patnidars, in which case an issue as to that title would have been framed and tried. S. 565 of Act X of 1877 does not enable an Appellate Court to declare a right in favour of one of the parties, where no issue has been fixed on the point, and the right has not been tried up in the lower Court. OFFICIAL TRUSTEE OF

224. ——— Objection to share taken on adoption.—Objection on appeal to extent of share awarded to adopted son.—In a suit by an adopted son to recover his share in his adoptive father's estate, a son having been born to the adoptive father subsequently to the plaintiff's adoption, the Court of first instance awarded the plaintiff a fourth share of the property in dispute. The defendant appealed to the District Court, but in appeal raised no question as to the extent of the share awarded to the plaintiff. On second appeal to the High Court, it was contended that, in any event, the plaintiff was only entitled to a fifth share. Held that, under the circumstances and having regard to the nature of the question, the point might be taken in second appeal on behalf of the defendant, and the High Court varied the decree by awarding the plaintiff a fifth share instead of a fourth share, but ordered the appellant (defendant) to bear his own costs of the appeal. *GIRIAPA v. 225. ——— Alienation.—Alienation by member of Mitakshara family—Invalidity of alienation—Proof of consideration.—A father having executed a deed conveying certain ancestral property to two persons (D and B), who alienated it to several others, his son sued to have the conveyances by D and B set aside on the ground that the deed given by the father was benami, and that D and B never had possession. The suit was dismissed by both the lower Courts. Held that, as plaintiff went to trial in the Courts below upon one issue only, viz., whether D and B were ever really in occupation, he was not entitled in special appeal to complain that evidence had not been taken as to the passing of consideration-money. Held that, as no issue was raised in the lower Courts which could have been the foundation for a declaration of right, the non-decision of a claim to such a declaration could not be made a ground of special appeal. Held that where the question whether the alienation of certain property by the father without the son's consent was valid under the Mitakshara law was not raised in the lower Courts, such invalidity could not be admitted as a ground of objection in special appeal, for it necessarily involved an issue of fact. *PURIAG DUTT v. Held also (MITTER, J., dis-sentiente) that, as defendant has succeeded in special appeal on an objection which he should have taken before, he ought to pay his own costs in this appeal, even should he succeed ultimately (the case being remanded); and that it is not the exclusive duty of a Court, but that of pleaders also, to see whether evidence tendered is legally admissible. MUNRAKHUN ROY v. 271. ———— Summary suit for possession.—A and B obtained a decree for possession of land against C. On their proceeding to execute their decree, D, who was in possession, presented a petition to the Munsif, complaining that they were thereby attempting unlawfully to interfere with his possession. The case was tried, on remand from the Judge, as a suit under the provisions of s. 229 of Act VIII of 1859. Held, per JACKSON, J., that, as the decree-holder had not complained that the officer of the Court had been obstructed or resisted by the claimant, the case did not fall within s. 229 of Act VIII of 1859; and, therefore, the Court had not jurisdiction to take summary cognizance of the case. Per MITTER, J.—This objection, taken for the first time on special appeal, did not affect the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court. *BUNAL SINGH CHOWDREY v. 272. ———— Objection to suit for mesne profits as being matter for execution.—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 244.—A landlord sued his tenant for arrears of rent, and obtained a decree for a certain amount and a declaration that, if the amount were not paid within fifteen days, the tenant should be ejected under s. 52, Act VIII of 1869. The amount was not paid, and the landlord executed the decree and obtained possession. The tenant appealed, and succeeded in getting the decree set aside, and the amount found due from him for arrears by the first Court was reduced and a decree made, directing that, if the reduced amount were not paid within fifteen days, he should be ejected. He paid the amount found due by the Appellate Court within the fifteen days, and recovered possession of his holding. He then brought a suit in the Munsif's Court to recover mesne profits from his landlord for the time he was in possession after the execution of the first Court's decree. It was contended on second appeal that the suit would not lie, as the matter might and should have been determined in the execution department under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that, as the suit was instituted in the Munsif's Court and the Munsif, under the circumstances of the case, was the officer who, in the first instance, would have had to determine the matter in the execution department, there was at most only an error of procedure and no exercise of jurisdiction by the Munsif which he did not possess, and that upon the authority of the decision in Purmessures Pershad Narain Singh v. Jankee Kooer, 19 W. R., 90, this could not be made a ground of objection on appeal. Held also that, the point being one that was not raised in the pleadings or before either of the lower Courts, and being a point which went exclusively to the jurisdiction of the Court, it could not be raised on second appeal. *AZIZUDDIN HOSSEIN v. 286. ——— Minority—Right of member of family to alienate.—A plaintiff obtained a decree to set aside an alienation of ancestral property effected by his father during his minority. Defendant objected in special appeal, first, that the suit was barred by lapse of time since plaintiff attained his majority; and, secondly, that, under the Mitakshara law, the father had a right to alienate a share of the property. Held that, as the first of these objections was entirely a matter of fact, and as the second, though essentially a matter of law, went to the substance of the plaintiff's claim, they should have been urged in the lower Courts, and could not be admitted for the first time in special appeal. BENODE PUTNAIK v. DOYANDHEE BULLIOE SINGH [9 W. R., 493]

287. ——— Settlement.—In the first Court an issue was raised whether or not the hearing of this suit was barred by the law of limitation. One of the grounds of appeal to the Judge was, that the Principal Sudder Ameen ought to have held the suit barred as regards the diaras under the special limitation of three years from the date of the Collector's settlement. The Judge did not notice this ground in his judgment. The same ground of appeal was repeated in the special appeal to the High Court, but that Court refused to entertain it, for the reason that it did not appear to have been raised in argument before the Judge or in the first Court. RAJ KUNWAR alias SHEOMURAT KUNWAR v. 290. ——— Setting aside ex-parte case.—A Munsif entertained a petition by a defendant under s. 119 of the Civil Procedure Code, and set aside his former judgment given ex-parte in favour of the plaintiff, and dismissed the plaintiff's suit. The plaintiff, on appeal before the Judge, did not raise the objection that the Munsif ought not to have entertained the petition of the defendant, as it had not been presented in due time. 347. — Objection to transfer from Munsif to Judge.—Although the transfer by the Judge of a case from the file of the Munsif to that of his own Court, and the decision of it upon issues framed by and evidence taken before the Munsif, is improper, yet, if no objection be taken to it at the time, it must be presumed that the parties consented to the action of the superior Court, and they are not at liberty to await its decision and on finding it adverse to them to take exception for the first time to the Court's proceedings on appeal. *YAKOUB ALI v. In special appeal the plaintiffs raised the objection that under the Hindu Wills Act a verbal will of this kind was not legal. Held that, after two Courts had decided unfavourably to plaintiff the only case raised by him there, he could not now turn round and throw out the defendant's case on a technical ground that the alleged gift was really a will. *RADHA BULLURH CHUCKERBUTTY v. It was found that the plaintiff had received payments in grain to the extent of Rs 71, more than half of which, however, he claimed to be entitled to appropriate to the payment of other antecedent debts which were due to him by the defendants. It was not stated at the time of payment towards which debt the payments were to be applied, but all the payments were admittedly made in kind. R., Cr., 24]

11. Confessions of co-prisoners when others were absent.—Exact correspondence in details of several statements made by an approver in the course of a trial is not corroborative evidence such as is ordinarily required to make it safe to convict a particular prisoner. Confessions of prisoners are not, as against their fellow-prisoners who were not present when the confessions were made, such corroborative evidence of the statement of an approver as would justify the conviction of the other prisoners thereon. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. BEBIN BISWAS [I. L. R., 10 Cal., 970]

12. Dacoity—Possession of stolen property.—Criminal Courts dealing with an approver's evidence in a case where several persons are charged should require corroboration of his statements in respect of the identity of each of the individuals accused. Queen-Emress v. Ram Saran, I. L. R., 8 All., 306, Queen-Emress v. Kure, Weekly Notes, All., 1886, p. 65, and Reg. v. Mullins, 3 Cox, C. C., 526, referred to. A, B, M, R, and N were tried together on a charge under s. 460 of the Penal code. The principal evidence against all of them was that of an approver. Against A, B, and M there was the further evidence that they produced certain portions of the property stolen on the night of the crime from the house where the crime was committed. With regard to R, it was proved that he was present when B dug up, but he did not appear to have said anything or given any directions about it. Held, with reference to A, B, and M, that it could not be said that their recent possession of part of the stolen property, so soon after it had been evidence of their participation in the crime as entitled the Court to act upon his story in regard to those particular persons. Held that, inasmuch as there was no sufficient material to warrant the inference of guilty knowledge on B's part, and with regard to N no property was found with him or produced through his instrumentality, both R and N ought to have been acquitted. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. statements he had made before the Deputy Magistrate. On being sent back to the Deputy Magistrate, that officer committed him for trial on a charge of giving false evidence. The Sessions Judge considered that the Deputy Magistrate was bound, under s. 349, Code of Criminal Procedure, to commit on the original charge of murder, and not on that of giving false evidence, and he recommended that the Deputy Magistrate should be quashed and the Deputy Magistrate directed to commit on the charge of murder. The High Court declined to interfere, as there was evidence on the record tending to support the charge for giving false evidence, and as s. 349 did not have the effect of taking away from Magistrates the power to entertain a charge of this kind. QUEEN v. MULLICK JEECHOO [23 W. R., Cr., 12]

14. Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 349—Withdrawal of pardon.—There is a grave doubt whether the deposition of an approver, taken before the committing Magistrate, may be used as evidence against his accomplices on their trial before the Sessions Court, the conditional pardon of the approver having been withdrawn. Where a conditional pardon granted to an approver is withdrawn under s. 349 of the Criminal Procedure Code by the Sessions Court, the Judge ought to wait till the conclusion of the trial of the accomplices, and then, before passing judgment on them, if found guilty, proceed against the approver. IN THE MATTER OF JOYUDEE PARAMANICK [7 C. L. R., 86]

15. Admissibility of after withdrawal of pardon.—Whether the depositions of an approver taken before the committing Magistrate may be used in the Sessions Court as evidence against accomplices, the approver having retracted his former statement and the conditional pardon having in consequence been withdrawn. 16. Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 349—Acquittal of prisoner—Withdrawal of pardon granted to approver after judgment of acquittal—Conviction on trial impugned.—At a Sessions trial the Judge, after acquitting the prisoner, passed an order withdrawing a pardon already granted to an approver, who had given his evidence as such approver before the Sessions Court, and ordered his commitment. The approver was charged, tried, and found guilty. Held by MITTER, J., that the order withdrawing the pardon and committing the approver was contrary to the provisions of s. 349 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the words "before judgment has been passed" being words inserted in the section to put a limit to the time within which the power of withdrawal of the pardon conferred in the Court of Sessions may be actually exercised; and that therefore the trial of the approver was illegal. The power of directing commitments conferred upon the Sessions Court by s. 349 of the Criminal Procedure Code can be exercised only before judgment has been passed. Held by MACLEAN, J., that it is not necessary that the order should be made before judgment is

The tender was accepted, and such person was examined as a witness against the other accused. Held that the tender of pardon was not improperly made, and the evidence of the approver was admissible. PER DUNN, J.—The word "supposed" in s. 339 must be taken merely as intended to exclude the case of a man who has actually been convicted of the crime, and not the case of a man who, although admitted to be a party to the crime, is unconvicted. *QUREZ, EMRESS v. The conduct to which these charges related was closely connected and mixed up with that to which the charges first-mentioned had reference. Under s. 337 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the Magistrate at Calcutta tendered a pardon to the prisoner upon the conditions specified in that section, and the prisoner accepted the pardon, and gave evidence for the prosecution. The Magistrate held that this evidence was not sufficiently corroborated and accordingly discharged all the accused, but the pardon was not withdrawn, and there was nothing to show that the Magistrate was dissatisfied with the prisoner's statement or considered that he had not complied with the conditions on which the

Held that by the terms of the conditional pardon granted to the accused by the Calcutta Magistrate, the conditions of which were satisfied, as was shown by its never having been withdrawn, the accused was protected from trial at Benares in respect of the offences under ss. 471, 472, and 474, and was not liable to be pro-

1. ARBITRATION UNDER SPECIAL ACTS AND REGULATIONS.

(a) ACT VI OF 1857.

1. ————— Act VI of 1857—Land acquisition—Appointment of third arbitrator—Non-attendance of umpire—Waiver.—Where one of two arbitrators, appointed under s. 10 of Act VI of 1857, by letter and also verbally authorized his co-arbitrator to appoint a certain person as third arbitrator, and the co-arbitrator wrote to the proposed third arbitrator informing him that he had been so appointed,—Semble—That there was a good appointment “by writing” of the third arbitrator within the meaning of s. 12 of Act VI of 1857. Where a third arbitrator appointed under s. 12 of Act VI of 1857, considering that his services were required merely as an umpire, though he had due notice of the first meeting, neglected to attend that or any subsequent meetings of the arbitrators and took no part in the making of the award,—It was held that such non-attendance of the third arbitrator did not render the award a nullity, but was only a ground for setting it aside on the ground of irregularity. Where an officer, appointed under Act VI of 1857 to conduct arbitration proceedings on behalf of Government, attended the first two meetings of the arbitrators and did not object to two of the arbitrators proceeding with the reference in the absence of the third arbitrator, and did not attend the subsequent meetings of the arbitrators,—It was held that the Government had thereby waived their right to insist on the non-attendance of the third arbitrator as a ground for setting aside the award. *ARDESAR HORMASJI WADIA v. Each arbitrator delivered a separate award in writing, two arbitrators finding for the plaintiff. The Civil Judge made a decree in accordance with the award of the majority of the arbitrators. The first defendant appealed on the grounds (1) that he had not consented to the arbitration, and (2) that there being no provision in the order of reference to the effect that the finding of a majority of the arbitrators should prevail, there was no valid award. Held that in this case the order of the Judge was valid without the assent of the persons to be bound; that he might, when he made the order, have inserted as a provision that the decision of the majority should be that of the body; and that there was no reason why his ratification of that mode of decision, wholly within his discretion, should not be equivalent to a prius command. *IMMEDY KANDAS RAMAYA GARDEN v. 53. Power of arbitrators to deal with question of costs—Excess in award.—The parties to a suit having referred the matters in dispute between them to arbitration, the arbitrators, without being specially authorized to decide the question of costs, included in the award a direction that the defendant should pay the costs of the plaintiff. On the application of the plaintiff the Subordinate Judge, under s. 526 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ordered the award to be filed, holding that the arbitrators had as such an implied power to deal with the costs. The defendant applied to the High Court under its extraordinary jurisdiction, praying that the record of the case might be sent for, and the order of the Subordinate Judge set aside. Held that the arbitrators had no implied power to deal with the question of costs, and that on the defendant's objection the Subordinate Judge should have refused to file the award. Under the circumstances, the High Court, instead of setting aside the order to file the award, directed the award to stand good, except so far as it awarded costs, and that the decree should be drawn in accordance with it, as it would be if it contained no direction as to costs. *DAGDUSA TILAKCHAND v. 66. ——— Refusal of arbitrator to reconsider award.—The plaintiff in this suit sued the defendants to recover certain moneys presented to him on his marriage, which he alleged the defendants had received and appropriated to their own use. The defendants denied that they had received such moneys, but admitted that such moneys had been credited by the plaintiff's father to the firm in which they, the plaintiff and the plaintiff's father, were jointly interested, against a larger amount of moneys belonging to the firm which had been expended on the plaintiff's marriage. The parties agreed to refer the matter in dispute between them to arbitration, and to abide by the decision of the arbitrator. The arbitrator decided that the plaintiff could not recover the money he sued for, and which had been credited to the firm of which he was a partner, as a larger sum had been expended on his marriage out of the funds of the firm. The plaintiff obtained the opinions of certain pandits to the effect that, under Hindu law, gifts on marriage are regarded as separate acquisitions, and prayed that the Munsif would remit the award with these opinions to the arbitrator. The Munsif remitted the award with the opinions, requesting the arbitrator to consider them, and to return his opinion in writing within a certain period. The arbitrator having refused to act further, the Munsif proceeded to determine the suit, and gave the plaintiff a decree on the ground that, in a joint Hindu family, presents received on marriage do not fall into the common fund. Held (PEARSON, J., dissenting) that, there being no illegality apparent on the face of the award, the Munsif was not justified in remitting the award, or in setting the award aside and proceeding to determine the suit himself, but that he should have passed judgment in accordance with the award. NANAK CHAND v. The plaintiffs and the defendants claimed under the same landlord. The Munsif remitted the award to the arbitrator for determination of the other matters arising in the case; the arbitrator, however, refused to act further in the matter, and the Munsif himself took up the case and decided it in favour of the plaintiffs. On appeal, the Subordinate Judge held that the award made by the arbitrator was sufficient for the determination of the case, and reversed the decision of the Munsif and gave the defendants a decree in terms of the award. Held that, as the

68. ——— Appeal impugning propriety of order of remission—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 520.—An award was remitted under s. 520 of Act X of 1877. The arbitrators refused to reconsider it, and the Court thereupon proceeded with the suit, and gave the plaintiffs a decree. The defendants appealed from such decree on the ground, amongst others, that the award had been improperly remitted under s. 520. Held that the question whether the award had been properly remitted under s. 520 or not could be entertained in such appeal. ABDUL RAHMAN v. 69. ——— Omission of arbitrator to carry out terms of reference—Suit for partition and to take accounts—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, ss. 2, 520, 522, 523—Filing agreement to refer to arbitration in Court—"Decree."—The sharers of a joint undivided estate agreed in writing that such estate should be partitioned, and the accounts thereof settled by arbitration, and named one of such sharers as arbitrator, and agreed that he should settle all the accounts, show the surplus at each sharer's credit, and prepare lots, after partition of the lands and houses comprehended in such estate, and have them drawn within one year from the completion of the partition. Subsequently one of such sharers applied, under s. 523 of Act X of 1877, to have such agreement filed in Court. The other sharers not objecting to this course, such agreement was filed accordingly, and the case was referred to such arbitrator. The arbitrator made an award whereby he partitioned such estate into lots, assigning some culy of such lots by name, and wherein he stated that he had not been able to settle the accounts owing to the default of the parties; and that, considering that the partition should take effect without any delay, he did not ask for further time. He further stated that "all the parties state that they will adjust the accounts after renewing the agreement," and he requested that the unassigned lots might be drawn in Court. The Court made an order confirming the award, and, it being objected that the settlement of the accounts should not be postponed, but that they should be settled as agreed, directed that the arbitrator should settle the accounts, and gave him a year's time for that purpose, and, some of the parties not being willing to draw the unassigned lots, directed the distribution of such lots "in reference to

6. REMISSION TO ARBITRATORS—concluded, the age and number" of the shares. Held that such order was a "decree" within the meaning of ss. 2 and 523 of Act X of 1877, that the arbitrator should himself have drawn such lots, or he should have made the parties draw them; but, inasmuch as it would not have strained the agreement to have had such lots drawn in Court and no objection had been taken to the arbitrator not having himself drawn them, it was not incumbent on the Court to have remitted the award in order that the arbitrator might have drawn them, that the Court, however, should not have distributed such lots in the manner it had done, but should have drawn a lot for each person, and in acting as it had done, it had acted contrary to the award, and for that reason its decree could not be maintained, and that, in confirming the award before the accounts had been settled and an award made in respect thereof, the Court had acted erroneously, inasmuch as the award had left undetermined a very important matter, viz., the settlement of the accounts, and the Court should, under s. 523 of Act X of 1877, have remitted the award for the reconsideration of the arbitrator; and, as it had the power to remit it upon such terms as it thought fit, the Court could have allowed one year, if necessary, for the settlement of the accounts; and on this account, and also because the Court had made an order postponing the settlement of the accounts, and thereby made an order contrary to, and in excess of, the award, its decree must be reversed. SABIE ALI v. 80. ——— Appointment of new arbitrator, Power of—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 506, 508, 510, 521.—On 19th June 1884, an application for an order of reference was made, under s. 506 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882), by both parties to a suit. It was signed by both defendants and by the plaintiffs' pleader. As the plaintiffs' pleader had not been "specially authorized in writing" to join in the application, the Court postponed making any order on the application till the 23rd idem. On that day the first defendant did not attend the Court, but the plaintiffs' pleader produced the requisite authority, and the Court made an order referring the suit to the decision of the arbitrator nominated in the application of the 19th. On 27th June the first defendant made an application to the Court to revoke the authority of the arbitrator and appoint a new arbitrator in his place, on the ground that, after signing the application of the 19th, he had become aware of certain circumstances connected with the arbitrator which showed that he was not worthy of the confidence reposed in him. No final order was made upon this application till after the submission of the award, when it was rejected on the ground that the charges of misconduct and partiality imputed to the arbitrator were not made out. Held, first, that the first defendant not having objected to the appointment of the arbitrator on or before the 23rd June 1884, when the order of reference was made, must be taken to have tacitly acquiesced in the course adopted by the Court, and that such acquiescence amounted to a fresh submission. Ardesar Hormosji Wadia v. Secretary of State for India, 9 Bom., 177, and Sreenath Ghose v. Raj Chunder Paul, 8 W. R., 171, followed. The objections raised by the first defendant could only be considered after the submission of the award, and then only to the extent permitted by s. 521 of the Code of Civil Procedure (XIV of 1882). When once a matter is referred to arbitration, it is not competent to the Court; under the second paragraph of s. 508 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), to "deal with" the matter in difference between the parties, except as provided in Ch. XXXVII of the Code. There is no section of that chapter which authorizes the Court to revoke the authority conferred on an arbitrator and to appoint a new one except in cases falling strictly within the purview of s. 510 of the Code, where "the scope and object of the reference cannot be executed." It is only in these cases, apparently, that the authority conferred on arbitrators can be revoked "for good cause," the cause being such as is contemplated in that section, as where "an arbitrator refuses, or neglects, or becomes incapable to act, or leaves British India under circumstances showing that he will probably not return to India at an early date." The enactment of the second paragraph of s. 508 of the Code of 1882, which does not occur in the corresponding section (315) of Act VIII of 1859, has the effect of rigidly restricting the Courts to the exact procedure laid down when dealing with cases in which the appointment of a new arbitrator becomes necessary. *HALIMBHAI KARIMBHAI v. That officer appointed arbitrators who subsequently made the following award: "Having in the presence of the karnamdazs of both parties taken down the depositions of the witnesses of both parties on the disputed locality and made investigation and enquiry on the spot, and having observed the aspect of the place, we have ascertained as follows." They then proceeded to state the boundary. "Going along west from the high peak of Sathoo Pahar, which is on the south of Lughapara, one comes to a gurb called Rajgurb; on the south of it is Doobhiadidi in Mahomedabad; on the north of that gurb is Kolarkoonda in Belputta; on the west of it is Perma hill; on the east, south, and west is Mahomedabad; on the north is Belputta." At the foot of the award were the words, "Decision of the arbitrators confirmed," dated and signed by the Deputy Collector. It is not necessary for the Court to pass any order in this matter." The plaintiff preferred objections to the award in so far as it directed payment by instalments, and the Court, holding that the arbitrators had no power to make such a direction, modified the award to that extent, under s. 518 of the Civil Procedure Code. On appeal, the District Judge, while allowing the power of the arbitrators to direct payment by instalments, reduced the number of instalments which had been fixed. Held that, as it was clear that the reference to arbitration gave the arbitrators full powers, not only as to the amount to be paid, but also as to the manner of payment, the lower Appellate Court was wrong in reducing the number of instalments which had been fixed. Per MAHMOOD, J.—The word "award" used in the last sentence of s. 522 of the Code must be understood to mean an award as given by the arbitrators, and not as amended by the Court under s. 518. Civil Procedure

Code, s. 521, cl. (a)—"Misconduct" of arbitrator.—The word "misconduct," as used in s. 521, cl. (a), of the Civil Procedure Code, should be interpreted in the sense in which it is used in English law with reference to arbitration proceedings. It does not necessarily imply moral turpitude, but it includes neglect of the duties and responsibilities of the arbitrators, and of what Courts of Justice expect from them before allowing finality to their awards. An arbitrator to whom the matters in difference in a suit were referred under s. 503 of the Civil Procedure Code, and who was directed by the order of reference to deliver his award by the 22nd September, applied on the 17th September for an extension of time on the ground that a very full investigation was necessary, which it was not possible to make within the prescribed period. On the 20th September, without waiting for the order of the Court, he notified to the parties that he proposed to hold an inquiry in the case on the 24th, and it appeared that he did not expect this intimation to reach them before the 21st or 22nd. On the 23rd he informed the plaintiff's pleader that a new date would be fixed for the inquiry, of which notice would be given to the parties. Notwithstanding this, on the 23rd the arbitrator took evidence for the defendant in the absence of the plaintiff and his pleader. All these proceedings were held before the arbitrator received an order of the Court extending the time for delivery of the award up to the 26th October. On the 27th September he directed the parties to be informed that the investigation would be held on the 5th October. On the 4th October the plaintiff presented a petition praying the arbitrator to summon witnesses and to take documentary evidence, and upon this nothing definite was settled at the time; but after the pleaders had left, the arbitrator passed an order rejecting the petition, on the ground that the evidence sought to be produced was unnecessary. On the same date and on the 5th and 6th October he took evidence for the defence in the absence of the plaintiff and his pleader. On the 10th he rejected a petition by the plaintiff praying for further time to produce evidence, and complaining of his having taken evidence in the plaintiff's absence and having received in evidence a fabricated document. On the 25th October the arbitrator delivered his award in favour of the defendant. Subsequently, upon objections made by the plaintiff, the Court set aside the award, and directed that the trial of the suit should proceed.—Held that, although no case of "corruption" within the meaning of s. 521, cl. (a), of the Civil Procedure Code had been made out against the arbitrator, the circumstances above stated amounted to "misconduct," and the award was, therefore, bad in law, and had rightly been set aside. *Soobal Thakur Opadeeah v. 131. — In another case heard at the same time and between the same parties, the facts were these:—The first meeting of the arbitrators was held on the 9th January without any notice to the defendants. It was alleged that nothing was done at this meeting. On that day the arbitrators sent a notice to the appellants appointing the next day (10th) at 6-30 P.M. for the next meeting. The defendants' attorney thereupon wrote protesting, and asked the arbitrators not to proceed, as they intended to apply to the Court. No notice of this protest was taken by the arbitrators, and they proceeded with the arbitration on the 10th in the absence of the defendants. On the 11th the defendants' attorney received a notice that the arbitrators would hold a meeting on the 12th at 8 A.M. A meeting was held on that day in the absence of the defendants, and an award was made decreeing the suit. Held that the arbitrators did not give the defendants a fair and reasonable opportunity of being heard, and were guilty of such misconduct as was sufficient to vitiate the award. Semble—The ex-parte meeting on the 10th was alone sufficient to warrant the Court in setting aside the award. *TOOLSEYMONY DASSEE v. Pending that being done, the parties applied to the Appellate Court to refer the case to arbitration, and that Court referred that application to the original Court for disposal, although the case was still pending on its own file for disposal. Subsequently another application was made to the original Court to refer the case to arbitration, and on the 10th May the record was sent to the arbitrator with directions to submit his award within seven days. On the 12th September, as the award had not been sent in, the original Court passed an order recalling the record, and subsequently the award of the arbitrator, dated the 12th September, was filed. The original Court thereupon forwarded the record to the Appellate Court for its decision. Objections were taken to the award, but overruled, and the Appellate Court passed an order directing the case to be sent back to the original Court, with orders to pass a formal decree in accordance with the award of the arbitrator. Held that the award was bad in law, because the time within which it was directed to be made had never been enlarged, and the Court's order of the 12th September recalling the record could not be taken as an indication that the time was enlarged. BHUGWAN DASS MARWARI v. The arbitrators being unable to agree upon the matters referred, the Court, on the application of one of them, appointed an umpire and directed that the award should be submitted on a particular date. An award was made by the umpire and one arbitrator, without the concurrence of the other arbitrator, and submitted to the Court, which passed a decree in accordance with its terms. Held that, in the present case, there had been no legal award such as the law contemplated, inasmuch as the agreement to refer gave the Court no power to appoint an umpire, and required that the award should be made by the arbitrators named by the parties. Held that s. 509 and the other sections preceding s. 523 of the Civil Procedure Code, relating to the power of the Court to provide for difference of opinion among the arbitrators, were only made applicable to cases coming under s. 523, so far as their

After this reference, the parties agreed by an aknamah to submit the same suits, together with other matters, to the arbitration of five persons, the effect being to withdraw the first submission and substitute the new agreement. Before these arbitrators arrived at a final conclusion, the parties by a selenamah compromised the whole of the subjects of dispute, and afterwards an award was drawn up in the terms of the selenamah and signed by two of the arbitrators and the head arbitrator. When the award was brought before the Subordinate Judge, he considered it had been made ultra vires in respect of those matters which were not involved in the suits originally referred, and accordingly made a decree only in those suits corresponding with the terms of the award. Some of the defendants applied to the Subordinate Judge to have the effect of a decree given to that portion of the award which was left outstanding by the first decision. This application was decreed and the remainder of the award enforced. An appeal to the Judge was dismissed with costs. Held that the award was illegal because it was not

During the investigation of these matters by the arbitrators the plaintiff offered to be bound by the oath of the defendant administered on the Koran. The defendant agreed to take such oath, and such was accordingly administered to him by the arbitrators, and his evidence taken, and an award made based on the evidence so taken. On special appeal to the High Court by the plaintiff, he objected for the first time, the objection not having been taken in his memorandum of special appeal, that the arbitrators were not legally competent to administer such oath, and the evidence so taken could not form a valid basis of an award, and the award was therefore void. Held per PEARSON, J., SPANKIE, J., dissenting, with reference to the legal competency of the arbitrators to administer the oath, that the objection was good, and that the arbitrators had no power to administer the oath. Per PEARSON, J., that the statement of the defendant made on an oath illegally administered could not form a valid basis of an award, and the award was void and should be set aside. Per SPANKIE, J., that the plaintiff having offered to be bound by the oath, and the defendant having agreed to take it, the plaintiff was bound by the evidence given on such oath; and that, as the arbitrators had by law and consent of parties authority to receive the evidence of the defendant, the substitution by them of an oath on the Koran for an affirmation did not, under the provisions of s. 13, Act X of 1873, invalidate such evidence, and consequently render the award based on such evidence void. WALL-UL-ZAH v. The plaintiff then applied to the Subordinate Judge to have the award filed in Court under the provisions of s. 525 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The defendants came in and objected to the award on the following amongst other grounds: that the agreement of submission was vague and indefinite, and did not clearly set out the matters in dispute. The Subordinate Judge overruled the objection without taking any evidence, and directed the award to be filed and a decree to be passed thereon. The plaintiff appealed. Held on appeal that, as the objection was well founded, inasmuch as the agreement to refer was vague and indefinite, and did not clearly lay down the power of the arbitrator in dealing with the subject-matter in dispute, and as it was not possible to make out what powers were intended to be conferred upon the arbitrator, the award should not be allowed to be enforced under the provisions of ss. 525 and 526. BINDESSURI PERSHAD SINGH v. The remaining arbitrators not being asked to sign it, they never did sign it. Held that the actual award was an oral award made by all the arbitrators on the last day of their joint sitting, and the drawing up of the formal award was a purely ministerial act to give effect to the previously completed judicial act. Certain differences having arisen among the three partners, two of them called upon the executors of the third to nominate an arbitrator under the terms of the deed, but they refused to do so. The first-mentioned partners then nominated an arbitrator, who in his turn nominated another, and, these having appointed an umpire, made an award. One of the partners at whose instance the matter in dispute had been referred to arbitration presented an application under s. 525 of the Civil Pro-

204. Sufficient cause—Objections to filing award—Setting aside award—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 327.—In an application under s. 327 of Act VIII of 1859 to have an award filed in Court so as to be enforced as a decree, it was objected on behalf of the defendant, amongst other things, that the award, which determined the succession to a talukdari registered under Act I of 1869, having been based on a certain will produced, which in terms referred to another will of the same testator not produced, there was miscarriage on the part of the arbitrators in making their award; the whole of the will, in the absence of the last-mentioned document, not having been before them. It appeared that the defendant in the proceedings before the arbitrators, notwithstanding the knowledge that this document was withheld, submitted nevertheless to take his chances of the arbitration; suggesting in fact favourable presumptions to himself in construing the will produced, or that the whole will not having been produced, it should be declared not to be operative, and that consequently the dispute should be determined according to the British law of succession as laid down by Act I of 1869, or according to custom, or according to the Mahomedan law of succession. Held that the award could not be set aside on the ground of the objection taken. According to the true construction thereof, the earlier sections are not incorporated into s. 327 of Act VIII of 1859, as they are into s. 326. The words "sufficient cause" in s. 327 should be taken to comprehend any substantial objection which appears on the face of the award, or is founded on the misconduct of the arbitrators, or on any miscarriage in the course of the proceedings, or upon any other ground which would be considered fatal to an award on an application to the Courts

Where proceedings under the Indian Arms Act, 1878, in respect of the unlawful possession of arms are taken against a member of a joint Hindu family not being the head of such joint family, and arms are found in a common room of the joint family house, it is incumbent upon the prosecution to give good evidence that such arms are in the exclusive possession and control of the particular member of the joint family

He was suspected of being in possession of arms after the cancellation of his licence. On the 23rd of April 1899, the Assistant Magistrate of Purneah, with a number of police, went to the house of the accused to search for arms. They surrounded it, arrested the accused, and then searched his house. The police had no search-warrants, nor was there anything to show upon what charge the accused was arrested. Two gun stocks, some ammunition, and implements for reloading were discovered in the house. There was nothing to show that the sanction required by s. 29 of the Arms Act was given before proceedings were instituted against the accused. Accused was convicted and sentenced under ss. 19 and 20 of the Arms Act. Held that the conviction under s. 20 was not sustainable, but that the accused must be taken to have had arms and ammunition as defined by the Arms Act within the meaning of sub-s. (f) of s. 19 of that Act, and the conviction under that section must be confirmed. Held, further, that with respect to the question of whether or not any previous sanction had been given under s. 29 of the Arms Act, the Court was not unmindful of the suggestion that the charge in this case was, in the first instance, in respect of an alleged offence under s. 20 and not of one under s. 19; but that ss. 19 and 20 were so interwoven that it was difficult to see how an offence could be committed under the first paragraph of s. 20 unless an offence under one of the enumerated sub-sections in s. 19 had also been committed. It was not suggested that the charge here was an offence under the second paragraph of s. 20. AMJED HOSSEIN v. QUEEN-EMPRESS . . . I. L. R., 27 Calc., 692

1. CIVIL ARREST.

1. ——— Arrest pending enquiry into insolvency—Application of judgment-debtor to be declared insolvent—Subsequent proceedings in execution against him—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 245B, 336, 337A, 344, and 349.—G obtained a money-decree against M, and in execution applied for his arrest and imprisonment. Before the warrant of arrest was issued, but after M had appeared in Court in obedience to a notice under s. 245B of the Civil Procedure Code, another judgment-creditor applied for execution of another decree against him. Thereupon M applied, under s. 344 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), to be declared an insolvent, and in his application mentioned G as one of his creditors (s. 345). The Subordinate Judge referred to the High Court the question whether, pending the inquiry into M's insolvency, he could be arrested in execution of G's decree against him. Held that there was no provision in the Code to prevent the Court from issuing a warrant of arrest against him. Where, however, such a judgment-debtor is brought before the Court under a warrant of arrest, or comes before it upon notice under s. 245B, the Court has a discretionary power not to put the warrant in force under s. 349 or not to issue it under s. 336 (where the requisite notification has been published by the Local Government) if the applicant furnishes security for his appearance when called upon. In such cases the Court can also act under s. 337A of the Civil Procedure Code. GANPAT BHAGYAT v. MAHADEV HARI

2. ——— Arrest of a lunatic in execution of a decree—Discretion of Court to order the arrest—Ground for disallowing application for arrest of judgment-debtor—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 337A.—Under the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), a Court is not bound to order the arrest of a lunatic in execution of a decree passed against him. The power to order his arrest is discretionary. The lunacy of a judgment-debtor is good cause within the meaning of s. 337A of the Code for disallowing an application for his arrest. BHANABHAI v. 3. ——— Est of debtor in execution of money decree—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 245B, 337A, 339—Subsistence allowance.—A decree by consent was made on 6th May 1896, ordering the defendant within one year to pay to the plaintiff Rs. 4,842 with interest and costs. On 14th May 1898 a notice was issued to the judgment-debtor to show cause why this decree should not be executed by his arrest and imprisonment: he pleaded poverty and "other sufficient cause," and the matter was set down for inquiry under s. 337A. When it came on, the Court, after hearing the evidence of the judgment-debtor, held that no cause had been shown why he should not be arrested, and that it was bound to order his arrest at once under that section, and subsistence allowance was ordered under s. 339. GUBBOY v. RAMDOYAL CHOWBAY . . . 2 C. W. N., 588

4. ——— Suit for damages for arrest in execution of decree—Malice—Reasonable and probable cause, Want of.—A suit to recover damages on account of injuries caused by an arrest in accordance with a decree of a competent Court can only be maintained under special circumstances,—viz., the plaintiff must show (i) that the original action, out of which the alleged injury arose, was decided in his favour; (ii) that the arrest was procured without reasonable and probable cause; (iii) that the injury sustained was something other than an injury which has been or might have been compensated for by an award of the costs of the suit,—e.g., that he has suffered "some collateral wrong." Where a plaintiff must show an absence of reasonable and probable cause, malice is not alone sufficient to entitle him to a verdict. RAJ CHUNDER ROY v. SHAMA SOONDARI DEBI

5. ——— Malice, Proof of.—To maintain such a suit, legal not actual malice is sufficient. GOUTIERE v. CHARRIOL

6. ——— Privilege from arrest—Privilege of party morando.—Where a native of Patna came from Calcutta to Madras on 24th October on account of a suit pending, in which he was plaintiff, and, the case having been adjourned on 27th October for seven weeks, remained in Madras on account of the suit, and was arrested on 10th November,—Held that he was privileged under s. 642 of the Code of Civil Procedure. IN RE SIVA BUX SAYUNTHARAM

21. ——— Arrest without warrant—Criminal Procedure Code, s. 51—Powers of the police to arrest without a warrant—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 220 and 312.—S. 54 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882) authorizes the arrest by the police, not only of persons against whom a reasonable complaint has been made, or a reasonable suspicion exists of their having been concerned in a "cognizable offence," but also of persons against whom "credible information" to that effect has been received. Semhle—Where the arrest is legal, there can be no guilty knowledge "super-added to an illegal act" such as it is necessary to establish against the accused to justify a conviction under s. 220 of the Penal Code. It is only where there has been an excess by a police officer of his legal powers of arrest that it becomes necessary to consider whether he has acted corruptly or maliciously, and with the knowledge that he was acting contrary to law. *QUEEN-EMPERESS v. The Deputy Magistrate considered the second arrest to be illegal, and prosecuted the sub-inspector for wrongful confinement, and fined him. Held that the Deputy Magistrate was right, the discharge from custody having been a useless procedure if the accused immediately became liable to be re-arrested without fresh material for prosecution of the charge. *RAMPAS SATHOO v. ASSAM LAND AND REVENUE REGULATION (I of 1886).

ss. 2, prov. (b), 12, and ss. 39, 151, and 154—Settlement-holder, his rights under a settlement—Nisf-kherajdar, his rights to a settlement.—The effect of ss. 39 and 151 of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation, 1886, is that a settlement made by a Settlement Officer, unless interfered with by the Chief Commissioner, is final; but the settlement-holder does not thereby acquire any right to the land so settled as against any person claiming rights to it. The effect of an order by the Government of India before the passing of the Assam Regulation in regard to the right of a nisf-kherajdar to hold lands found upon survey to be in excess of his nisf-kheraj estate, and to obtain a settlement thereof, considered. In 1881 S, a nisf-kherajdar, obtained a settlement for a year of certain lands which were found upon survey to be in excess of his nisf-kheraj estate. Subsequently a pottah was granted to S for a portion of the excess lands, while the other portion was settled by the revenue authorities under a kobala pottah with M, who entered into possession under his settlement. In a suit by S, the nisf-kherajdar, for a declaration of his right to a settlement of the portion settled with M and for possession,—Held that, having regard to the provisions of s. 2, prov. (b), s. 12 of the Regulation, and the order of the Government of India, the nisf-kherajdar was entitled to a declaration of his right to a settlement, but in view of s. 154 he was not entitled to a decree for possession. s. 59—Rent suit—Suit for arrears due before Regulation came into force.—In a suit for the recovery of arrears of rent accrued due before the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation of 1886 came into force, which was instituted on the 7th of July 1886, where it appeared that the plaintiff's name had been previously registered, but that the Chief Commissioner had issued no notification under s. 48 of the Regulation directing that the registers then in existence should be deemed to be registers prepared under s. 59 of the Regulation, and that the plaintiff's name had not been registered under the last-mentioned section:—Held that s. 59 applies to rent accruing due after the Regulation came into force, and not to rent already due on the date on which it came into force, and that, therefore, the suit was maintainable. to which reference is made in s. 70 includes both an estate as well as a share in respect of which revenue has been separately apportioned. The object of s. 37, Act XI of 1859, is the same as that of s. 71, Regulation I of 1886. Those sections cannot be said to have different meanings, for, if it were to be held that the incumbrance which could be set aside under s. 71 of the Regulation I of 1886 must be an incumbrance actively created by the previous holder, it would amount to this, that any acquiescence or laches, either wilful or arising from pure negligence on the part of the holder, by which the talukh or estate becomes incapable in the hands of the purchaser of yielding the Government revenue, would be outside the scope of this section. Mere words do not amount to an assault, but the words which the party threatening uses at the time may either give his gestures such a meaning as to make them amount to an assault, or, on the other hand, may prevent them from being held to amount to an assault. The Judge, therefore, proceeded to record medical and other evidence on the point, and having come to the conclusion that there was no reason to doubt from the prisoner's conduct, either prior or subsequent to the murder, that in committing the murder he knew that he was doing a wrongful act, convicted the prisoner. Held that the plea was in effect one of not guilty, and that the trial should not have proceeded without assessors, and that it should be quashed. *QUEEN v. (d) DEBTS.

18. ———— Proclamation as to nature and value of property—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, ss. 268, 278, 287.—A decree-holder, by a prohibitory order issued under s. 268 of the Civil Procedure Code, attached a debt due to his judgment-debtor. The person served with the order applied under s. 278 to have the attachment removed. Held that the application could not be entertained under s. 278, that section having no application to the case; but that, before issuing a proclamation of sale in execution of a decree of the debt so attached, it is the duty of the Court, under s. 287 of the Code, to ascertain all that the Court considers it material for the intending purchaser to know in order to judge of the nature and value of the property proclaimed for sale. If the property of which sale is sought is a debt, and the Court receives notice from the alleged debtor that no debt exists, the Court should satisfy itself as to the existence or otherwise of the debt, and, if it comes to the conclusion that no debt exists, should abstain from proceeding to sale.

Claims over which no Court in British India has jurisdiction are not debts liable to be attached under s. 266 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877). The mere circumstance that the garnishee is at the time of the application for attachment beyond the limits of British India would not of itself render the debts not liable to be attached. maintenance of widow with proviso against alienation—Such land exempt from attachment—By a deed of assignment the usufruct of certain land was given to a Hindu widow for her maintenance, the deed expressly stipulating that the same was not to be in any way alienated. A judgment creditor of the widow caused the land to be attached in execution of a money-decree. The widow contended that the land was protected from attachment under s. 266 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1852). Both the lower Courts disallowed the widow's contention. On appeal to the High Court, Held, reversing the orders of the lower Courts, that, having regard to the proviso against alienation contained in the deed of assignment, the usufructuary interest in the land assigned to the widow was one over which she had no power of disposal, and, consequently, could not be attached and sold in execution of a money-decree against her. DIWALI v. By his first wife he had a son U. J's second wife was G, by whom he had a son, whose widow was K, the defendant in the suit. J died, leaving U his son, G his widow, and K his son's widow, and on his death U inherited the village. Prior to the year 1874 U had made a gift to G of 105 bighas situate in the village. In 1874 the rights and interests of U in the village were sold by auction and purchased by T, the ancestor of the plaintiffs. G, by a deed of gift, conveyed the 105 bighas to K, and ultimately died on 26th January 1883. Plaintiffs then sued to set aside the gift and for possession of the land. The learned Judge found that the land was given to G in lieu of her maintenance, which she was to hold rent-free for her life, and that she had been in possession thereof for twenty years. Further, that U had the right to resume the land and assess it to rent on the death of G, and that all the rights and interests of U in the land were attached and sold in 1874. On second appeal it was contended that the interest of U in the land at the time of the sale of the village by auction was in the nature of a mere expectancy, and therefore could not be sold and was not sold. Held that U gave to G the usufruct of the land for her life in lieu of her maintenance; that after the gift the interest of U in the land was of the same character and carried with it the same consequences as the reversion which the lesser would have for land leased for life or years, and analogous to the right which a mortgagor who had granted a usufructuary mortgage would have; that U had a vested right in the land which was capable of being sold, and that right passed to the auction-purchaser at the sale of 1874. The defendant, who was 80 years of age, claimed the house as her absolute property, alleging that her son by a deed had given it to her as a provision for her maintenance. The deed stated that she had been made the owner of the house, that the donor had no right to it, and that it wholly belonged to her. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to the declaration prayed for. The surrounding circumstances showed that the house was revertible to the donor on the defendant's death. He had what in English law would be termed a vested remainder on her death, and he had, therefore, a saleable interest during her life. 142. ——— Security for satisfaction of decree—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 484—Security.—The defendants were, on the 10th of March 1881, called upon, under s. 484 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), to furnish security for the satisfaction of a decree that the plaintiff might obtain against them, or to show cause on the 28th March 1881 why security should not be furnished. To this direction the order was appended, which is provided by the form at the end of the Code of Civil Procedure for a provisional attachment under s. 484. The defendants, to avoid the attachment, gave security on the 12th March 1881 for satisfaction of the decree, and the attachment was not carried out. On the 28th March 1881, they showed cause why security should not be furnished, but the Subordinate Judge, as security had been furnished, thought the matter was at an end, and that he could not cancel the security bond. Held that the Subordinate Judge was wrong; the security so given was really not the security expressly provided under s. 484, and did not preclude the defendants from showing cause why no security should be furnished. *LOTLIKAR v. to the confirmation of the sale, urging that the property sold was never attached in execution of the decree, and the attachment previous to judgment was infructuous, because afterwards the claim was dismissed by the Court of first instance; that there had been several other irregularities in publishing and conducting the sale; and that, owing to the irregularities, property had been sold at a grossly inadequate price, causing substantial injury. The Subordinate Judge, overruling the objections, confirmed the sale. On appeal by the judgment-debtor, Held, following Mahadeo Dubey v. Dhola Nath Dicksit, I. L. R., 5 All., 66, that a regularly perfected attachment is an essential preliminary to sales in execution of decreets for money; and where there has been no such attachment, any sale that may have taken place is not simply voidable, but de facto void, and may be set aside without any inquiry as to substantial injury being sustained by the judgment-debtor for want of a valid attachment; and that an attachment before judgment, like a temporary injunction, becomes functus officio as soon as the suit terminates. Further, that the phrase "a material irregularity in publishing or conducting" in the first paragraph of a 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure should be liberally construed, and that absence of attachment of property at the time of sale thereof is "a material irregularity," attachment being the first step which a Court in executing a simple money-decree has to take to assert its authority to bring property to compulsory sale. BAM CHAND v. 211. Question of priority of attachment—Attachment under decree of High Court of property already attached under decree of Small Cause Court—Claim to attached property, by what Court to be decided—Civil Procedure Code (1882), s. 272.—In execution of a decree obtained in the High Court, the plaintiffs, on the 22nd of March 1895, attached certain property of the defendant, which, however, had been already attached on the 22nd of February 1895 by one R., who had obtained a decree against defendant in the Court of Small Causes. The plaintiffs' attachment was therefore effected under s. 272 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) by a notice addressed by the Prothonotary of the High Court to the Registrar of the Small Cause Court. The claimant was mortgagee in possession, and the defendants were his tenants. On the 26th February he had lodged a claim in the Small Cause Court to the said property as mortgagee in possession, and on the 25th March 1895 a consent order was passed by the Chief Judge of that Court directing that R.'s attachment should stand subject to the claimant's claim. On the 22nd April 1895, the claimant applied to the Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court to issue a notice to the plaintiffs in this suit, under s. 272 of the Civil Procedure Code, to determine the question of priority of claim to the attached property between him and the plaintiffs. His application was refused, the Chief Judge being of opinion that he could not interfere in a High Court suit. The claimant then filed his claim in the High Court, and took out this summons to remove the plaintiffs' attachment. Held that, under s. 272 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Small Cause Court was the only Court to decide the question of priority between the claimant and the plaintiffs. JAY-NARAYAN MEGHRAJ v. It did not appear that any notice was given to him before the order of dismissal was made. Nevertheless the decree-holder proceeded to execute a decree of the judgment-debtor attached by him and brought to sale certain property which was in question in the present suit, and it was purchased bond fide by the present defendant, who obtained a sale certificate from the Court. The present plaintiff claimed as assignee from the holder of the attached decree to execute it against the same land, and now sued for a declaration that it was liable to be brought to sale by him, and that the defendant's purchase was void as against him. Held (1) that under the circumstances of the case the attachment in execution of the decree of 1885 was subsisting at the time of the purchase by the defendant; (2) that a judgment-creditor who attaches a decree is competent to execute it. RANGASAMI CHETTI v. A few days after obtaining such decree, he again attached the judgment-debtor's property. The mortgagees then sued on their mortgage, and obtained a decree for sale. The sale in execution of the attaching creditor's decree and that ordered by the decree in favour of the mortgagees were both advertised for the same day. The plaintiff purchased at the sale under the attaching creditor's decree, and then sued for a declaration that the property was not liable to be sold in execution of the mortgage-decree on the ground that the judgment-creditor's attachment was restored by the decree under s. 283 of the Code, and that the mortgage executed by the judgment-debtors was invalid as against the plaintiff, the purchaser at the execution sale. Held (affirming the decisions of the Subordinate Judge and the District Judge) that the plaintiff was entitled to the decree sought. Mahommed Waris v. G. ALIENATION DURING ATTACHMENT

An award was made directing that L should transfer certain property to Q by way of sale. Between the day the award was made and the day a decree was made, in accordance with the award, such property was attached in execution of a decree against L. After the attachment, L, in compliance with the decree made in accordance with the award, executed a conveyance of such property to Q. Held by the Full Bench (affirming the decision of STRAIGHT, J., and reversing that of SPANKIE, J.) that such conveyance was not a "private alienation" in the sense of s. 276 of Act X of 1877, and was therefore not void under that section as against a claim enforceable under such attachment. *QURBAN ALI v. While the attachment was subsisting, and prior to the sale, the holders of other money-decrees against the same judgment-debtor preferred applications, purporting to be made under s. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code, and praying that the proceeds of the sale of the property might be rateably divided between themselves and the attaching creditor. The Court refused to remove the attachment until these creditors had been paid. It was found that the sale by the judgment-debtor was a bona fide transaction, entered into for valuable consideration. Held that, inasmuch as no order for attachment of the property was passed in favour of the decree-holders in manner provided by s. 274 of the Civil Procedure Code, their claims were not entitled to the protection conferred by s. 276 against private alienations of property under attachment; that these claims were not enforceable under the attachment which was made; that the sale by the judgment-debtor was valid; and that execution of Khushali, I. L. R., 7 All., 702*, followed. In June 1883 A, B, and C obtained separate money-decrees against, amongst others, T as executor under the will of his father. Some time in 1884 B attached the whole of the testator's properties in execution of his decree, and A and C applied for rateable shares in the sale-proceeds. On the 2nd June 1884 the parties came to an arrangement, by which it was agreed that B's claims should be satisfied by means of all the attached properties with the exception of one, which should be left free for the benefit of the other judgment-creditors. By a deed dated the 16th June, but which was found to have been actually executed on the 17th, T conveyed this property to A, and on the 17th June all the other attached properties were sold in execution of B's decree, and on the same day B put in an application for the removal of his attachment from this property. D, another decree-holder, on the 16th June, applied to be included in the rateable distribution of the properties attached by B, and on the 30th June D attached the property sold to A in execution of his decree. A preferred a claim to the property, which was disallowed, and A thereupon brought a suit to establish her right to it on the ground (inter alia) that B's attachment had ceased to exist on the date of her purchase, and that the sale was a valid one. Held that the sale to A was valid against D. *DURGA CHURN ROY CROWDERY v. In 1864 A, in execution of his decree, attached land belonging to C, but the execution case was struck off the file in 1865. After several ineffectual proceedings, A re-attached the property in March 1869. In execution of a decree against C, B had in February 1869 attached the same property. The property was sold under A's attachment in May 1869, and on the application of A, the Subordinate Judge, on the strength of A's attachment in 1864, gave priority to A's claim over that of B. The balance of the sale-proceeds, after satisfaction of A's decree, was only sufficient to cover a small portion of the decree obtained by B. In a suit by B against A, under s. 270, Act VIII of 1859, to recover the amount of her claim which remained unsatisfied,—Held that the attachment of A in 1864, on the strength of which A's claim was considered by the Subordinate Judge to have priority over that of B, was not a sufficient and valid attachment under s. 270. The attachment contemplated by that section means an attachment after a final money-decree. Held, also, that the striking off of the execution case of A in 1865 caused an extinguishment of the effect of the attachment of 1864. *BINDA BIBEY v. the order having failed to furnish adequate security, the execution case was struck off. The appeal to the Privy Council having been dismissed, the decree-holder revived execution proceedings, adding costs and interest to her original claim. Upon this a third party intervened, and objected to the attachment on the ground that he had obtained a mukurari potah of the property from B's representative. The objection having been allowed under Act VIII of 1819, s. 240, A brought a suit to have the mukurari declared to be invalid and fictitious. Held that plaintiff was not required to cause A's admitted proprietary right to be sold before she could maintain her suit. Held that the act of the Court in striking off the execution proceeding because of the inability of the decree-holder to furnish the required security was only for the convenience of business, and it left intact all the proceedings which had been taken up to that stage; nor did the decree-holder abandon the attachment, which was therefore subsisting when the mukurari potah was granted. Accordingly the alienation of the property by the potah was invalid and inoperative. Soondar Singh v. Broochia Aham Bazaar [24 W. R., 30

Nothing was done by the decree-holder until the 30th November 1874, when a fresh application for attachment and sale was made. 2. — Mischief by fire

—Possession of a fire-ball.—Held by GLOVER, J., that incendiarism having, on several occasions, occurred in a village, produced by a ball of rag, with a piece of burning charcoal within it, and the prisoner one evening being discovered to have a ball of that description concealed in his dhoti, which contained burning charcoal, he is, under s. 511 of the Penal Code, guilty of an attempt to commit mischief by fire. The possession of the instrument to commit mischief by fire, and the going about of the person with it, are sufficient to raise a presumption that he intended to commit the act, and had already begun to move towards the execution. These facts are sufficient to constitute an attempt. Held by MITTAR, J., that the possession of a fire-ball and moving about with it cannot support a conviction under ss. 436 and 511 of the Penal Code. These facts are not sufficiently indicative of an intention to destroy a building used for human dwelling. To constitute an offence under s. 511 of the Penal Code, it is not only necessary that the prisoner should have done an overt act towards commission of the offence, but that the act itself should have been done in the attempt to commit it. *QUEEN v. 2. Mischief by fire

—Possession of a fire-ball.—Held by GLOVER, J., that incendiarism having, on several occasions, occurred in a village, produced by a ball of rag, with a piece of burning charcoal within it, and the prisoner one evening being discovered to have a ball of that description concealed in his dhoti, which contained burning charcoal, he is, under s. 511 of the Penal Code, guilty of an attempt to commit mischief by fire. The possession of the instrument to commit mischief by fire, and the going about of the person with it, are sufficient to raise a presumption that he intended to commit the act, and had already begun to move towards the execution. These facts are sufficient to constitute an attempt. Held by MITTER, J., that the possession of a fire-ball and moving about with it cannot support a conviction under ss. 436 and 511 of the Penal Code. These facts are not sufficiently indicative of an intention to destroy a building used for human dwelling. To constitute an offence under s. 511 of the Penal Code, it is not only necessary that the prisoner should have done an overt act towards commission of the offence, but that the act itself should have been done in the attempt to commit it. *QUEEN v. a further mortgage executed, which included the original sum, with the interest then due, and the further advance. Further advances were made in the same way in October 1871 and March 1876. In all these transactions the defendant had no independent professional advice, and the mortgages were prepared in the plaintiff's office, but not charged for. In a suit to recover the sum due on the mortgages by sale of the mortgaged property, the plaintiff abandoned any accumulation of interest since the date of the third mortgage. Held that the defendant, notwithstanding he had declined the offer of the plaintiff in 1869 to tax the bills, and notwithstanding the delay that had taken place, was entitled (having regard to the relation between the parties and to the fact that a portion of the costs was incurred in suits then pending) to have the bills taxed and to re-open the account. Under the circumstances, the Court would not infer acquiescence from the delay on the part of the defendant, nor did the plaintiff's offer to tax, and the defendant's refusal of that offer, debar the defendant of his right to have the bills taxed in the usual way. Held, also, that there is no rule which prevents an attorney from taking security or otherwise arranging with his client for the payment of costs which have actually become due, and that the plaintiff was entitled to sale of the property, to accumulations of interest prior to the date of the third mortgage calculated by allowing annual rests, to interest at 10 per cent. as being a fair rate for the client to have undertaken to pay when the mortgages were executed, and to interest on his costs. *MONOHUR DOSS v. On an application by the attorney for the plaintiff that the defendant might be ordered to pay to him his costs of suit out of the sum which had been attached in the defendant's hands, and on which the attorney claimed to have a lien, the Court held that the attorney had a lien for his costs on the sum so attached, but that the only order it could make was an order to the defendant not to pay the sum attached to any one without notice to the attorney. *NAWAB NAZIM OF BENGAL v. The title-deeds remained with M. Held that D was entitled to have re-delivery of the deeds to him from M, even independently of the express contract to return them. S. 171 of the Contract Act does not give an attorney an absolute lien. S. 1 provides that nothing in the Act contained shall affect any usage or custom of trade, and, as no part of the English law is inconsistent with s. 171, cases arising in this country must be governed by the English authorities. According to those authorities, while the relation of attorney and client exists, the client may either continue to employ the attorney or change him. When he claims to do the latter, the attorney being willing to act, he cannot ask the attorney to give up papers in his possession without first satisfying the lien. The attorney has his option,—he may, if he chooses, either go on acting for his client, or cease to act; if he adopt the latter course, he must give up the papers. It was not proved that A assented to the appropriation by G of the sum retained in payment of the promised present. A sued G to recover the sum retained. Held (1) that, if G was to be regarded as a barrister, he was under a disability to contract with A as to his fees; (2) that if G was to be regarded as a pleader, he was prohibited by a Circular Order of the Sudder Adalat from enforcing this contract. Semble—The decision in *Kennedy v. 3. — Right of client to sue for return of fee when barrister was absent—Advocate and client.—Taking it that the rule of English law, that the relation of counsel or advocate and client creates mutual incapacity to make a binding contract of hiring and service, either express or implied, governs the relation of advocate and client generally in this country, there must be the relation of advocate and client to give rise to the incapacity, and the incapacity is strictly confined to contracts relating to service as an advocate in litigation and matters ancillary to such service. The degree of barrister is but one of the qualifications for admission and enrolment as an advocate of the High Court. Where the defendant, a barrister who was not admitted an advocate of the High Court, or specially authorized to plead in the superior Court, accepted a vala (a kalatnamah from the plaintiff to defend him upon a charge pending in the Session Court, and the defendant failed to appear on the day to which the trial of the plaintiff was adjourned, and the plaintiff sued the defendant to recover the amount of the fee paid,—Held that the suit was maintainable. KISHNA ROW v. MUTTUKISHNA. 4 Mad., 244

4. — Right to sue for fees for professional services—Barrister enrolled as advocate.—A barrister enrolled as an advocate of the High Court is incapacitated from making a contract of hiring as an advocate, and cannot maintain a suit for the recovery of his fees. SMITH v. GUNESSEE LAL. [3 N. W., 83]

5. — Right to act as advocate and attorney.—Where a barrister renders services which go beyond his profession as a barrister, his incapacity to recover fees as a barrister does not extend to such extra-professional services; and where, as in Burma, the law enables an advocate to recover fees, and a barrister acts both as an advocate and in other capacities, the remuneration claimed by him ought to be divided into two parts; and while, in that part of his services in which he acts as attorney, he should be allowed to recover fees

1. GENERAL CASES.

1. ——— Custom—Recognition of Benami transactions.—Benami transactions are a custom of the country, and must be recognized till otherwise ordered by law. Meanwhile the extent of their compatibility with an honest purchase depends upon the peculiar circumstances of each case. KALLY MOHUN PAUL v. BHOLANATH CHAK- LADAR . . . 7 W. R., 138

2. ——— Presumption as to ownership.—The habit of holding land benami, though inveterate in India, does not justify the

Courts in making every presumption against apparent ownership. JUDDOONATH BOSE v. SHUMSOONISSA BEGUM, BUZLOOR RUHEEM v. SHUMSOONISSA BEGUM

[8 W. R., P. C., 3: 11 Moore's L. A., 551]

3. ——— Presumption—Evidence justifying benami purchase.—Evidence raising presumption of purchase at a sale in execution being made benami for the judgment-debtor discussed. RAM CHUNDER BYSACK v. DINO NATH SURMA SIKKAR

[5 C. L. R., 470]

4. ——— Purchase of property by manager of joint family property.—When the manager of a joint Hindu family re-purchases benami property sold for arrears of revenue, the presumption is that the property so purchased is held by him for the benefit of the joint family. KALEB DOSS MOOKERJEE v. MOTHOOBANATH BANERJEA

[5 W. R., 154]

5. ——— Use of farzi name.—In the case of a benami purchase, the mere use of the farzi name is sufficiently disposed of if the party whose name is used sets up no claim, and if there appears to have been long-continued possession on the part of the person claiming to be the beneficial owner. HOYMOBUTTY DASSEE v. SREEKISSAN NUNDY

14 W. R., 58

6. ——— Purchase by father in name of son.—Where the father of a joint Hindu family purchases property in the name of his minor son, the presumption is that it is a benami purchase by the father on whose death it becomes the property of the family. BRAGBUT CHUNDER DEY v. HURO GOBIND PAL

20 W. R., 269

7. ——— Lease taken in name of wife and son.—Where a father obtained, once and again, a lease in the name of his wife and son, paying the consideration-money out of his own funds, and on the decease of his wife obtained the lease in the joint names of the son and of his daughter by the deceased, and it was found that latterly the possession was not with the father,—Held that there was no error in law in the Judge's coming to the conclusion that the property was not intended by the father for his own benefit, but was given to his wife and children for their maintenance. ZEEMUT ALI v. ALIMOONISSA

10 W. R., 277

8. ——— Purchase in the name of Hindu wife.—The question for decision was whether a purchase in 1842, in the name of a Hindu wife, of an interest in part of her husband's ancestral estate, was for herself, or for her husband, her name being used benami for him. The High Court, at the hearing in appeal, considered certain previous decisions in cases arising out of benami transactions. But in arriving at its conclusion, which was that the property was the wife's, it proceeded entirely on the evidence in the particular case. The judgment of the Judicial Committee, which also went upon the evidence, was, on the contrary, that the husband was, in fact, the purchaser, the purchase

9. ——— Purchase by husband in name of wife—Claim by husband when property is attached.—A husband who puts his wife into the position of being the true owner of an estate and allows her to deal with the world as the true owner, deprives himself of the right to set up, or rely on, his benami title. NIDHEE SINGH v. BISSONATH DOSS

10. ——— Property of husband bought from wife.—Where property is bought from a wife as the ostensible owner, the husband consenting to the sale, and the transaction is bond-fide on the part of the purchaser for a consideration, the purchase is a good one, even if the property is not the wife's, but the husband's. GOLAM RUSSOOL v. ABDOL RUHEEM

15 W. R., 19

11. ——— Property of husband standing in name of wife.—Certain property standing in the name of a wife was mortgaged by her. The mortgage debt was paid off. The mortgagee, having a decree against the husband, attached and sold the property. Held that, though payment of the mortgage debt by the wife might have given her a lien on the property to the extent of any money paid by her out of her own fund, the mortgagee's acting on the wife's assertion of title did not prevent him, when he subsequently discovered that the property was really the deceased husband's, from making it available for the satisfaction of his decree against the husband. AMEEROONISSA BEEBEE v. BENODE RAM SEIN

2 W. R., 29

12. ——— Property acquired by Mahomedan married woman.—Where property is acquired by a Mahomedan lady living in a state of wedlock, and also by her legitimate daughter, a very small amount of evidence would suffice to dispose of the presumption arising from the fact of title deeds being with the lady, against the supposition of a benami purchase. KUDEERUN v. LALLUN

[14 W. R., 366]

13. ——— Purchase in name of daughters—Right of bond fide purchaser from daughter.—A, having two daughters, B and C, granted a patni talukh of certain lands in his zamindari to them in their infancy, and transacted the business connected therewith as manager down to the time of his death. After his death, B sold her interest to her sister C, and C sold the patni talukh to D. The heirs of A brought a suit against D for the lands. Held that the lower Court might, upon these facts, infer that the grant of the patni talukh by A to his daughters was by way of provision for them, and that it was not a case in which the daughters held benami for the father. Secondly, that even if it were so, D, acquiring by a bond fide purchase

23. — Evidence of ownership—Title to property seized in execution—Evidence—Suspicion.—In determining the right to property seized in execution, the Court must not declare a person claiming as purchaser to be a benamidar for the debtor upon suspicion merely, but its decision must rest upon legal grounds established by legal testimony. *FAEZ BUX CHOWDHRY v. 24. — Breach of covenant—Cause of action—Plaint—Consent of benamidar.—The plaintiff alleged that the three first defendants with a brother, since deceased, purchased a patni mehal therein described; that the same was thereafter sold for arrears of rent, and purchased by the said three defendants with their own funds; but that the Collector, in compliance with their petition, entered the name of their mother, the fourth defendant, as the purchaser. The plaintiff then alleged a subsequent sale by the three first defendants to the plaintiff; that they, the said defendants, caused a kobala to be executed by the fourth defendant, and that they, being the real owners, became witnesses to the deed, and received the whole of the consideration-money, and prayed by reason of ouster and disturbance alleged for damages against all the defendants for breach of the following covenant contained in the kobala: "If any one making any objection to the sale by me of the said mehal give you trouble in any way, then I will put matters straight. If I fail to do so, I will return the consideration-money. If I do not return it, you will realize it by means of a suit." The Civil Judge in whose Court the plaint was filed held that no cause of action was shown, and the High Court on appeal remanded the case to try whether there had been the ouster and disturbance alleged, and whether, under the circumstances, they constituted a breach of the contract. The High Court, however, dismissed the suit against the three first defendants, holding that the mother only was bound by the contract. Held by the Privy Council that the plaintiff disclosed a cause of action against all the defendants, and that the case must be remanded accordingly. One issue raised by the plaint was whether the kobala was really entered into by the mother as the agent and on behalf of the three first defendants, and by their authority. *BISHESWARI DEBYA v. 27. — Benami purchase by judgment-debtor of property subject to mortgage decree—Effect of.—P L brought a suit against H, and, while it was pending, executed a bond in favour of R C hypothecating the property in dispute. The suit was dismissed with costs, and another suit was brought by one P M upon the bond, and, while it was pending, the property in dispute was sold in execution of H's decree for costs and purchased by S. The day after this, i.e., on 10th November 1868, P M obtained a mortgage decree, which he transferred to R B, who executed it and attached the property in dispute, when S intervened, objecting that the mortgage, the mortgage decree, and the transfer of the decree were all fictitious and collusive, and brought about by P L. This objection having been rejected, a suit was brought on the same ground against R B, P M, and the widow of P L to establish S's rights and to stop the pending sale. The property was, however, sold and purchased by D, who was then made a defendant in the suit. Both the lower Courts found that R B was a benamidar for P L, and upheld the title of S in preference to that of D. Held on the principle of In re Suroop Chunder Hazra, B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 938 : 9 W. R., 230, viz., that the purchase by a judgment-debtor extinguishes the decree,—that the same result followed in a benami transaction when the decree was a mortgage decree, and therefore, although S by virtue of his auction-purchase was not entitled to the property in dispute, yet he was entitled to a declaration that, so far as the amount of his purchase-money went to satisfy the decree of November 1868, it should be considered a charge on the property. *DHONDHAI SINGH v. 48. — Registration of name.—The benami system being one of the recognized institutions of the country, a purchaser does not discharge himself of the onus which lies upon him, by looking only to the apparent title. purchased by plaintiff ostensibly on his own account. Having reason, however, to believe that the purchase was benami for the judgment-debtor, the decree-holder again took out execution against the same property, and advertised it for sale. Plaintiff intervened, but his objections were disallowed by the Court, which found the judgment-debtor in bona fide possession on his own account. The property was then sold, and one of the defendants bought it. Plaintiff then sued to have the execution proceedings set aside, and to have it declared that the property had been bought on his own account and with his own money. Held that the onus of proof lay on the plaintiff. MUDDUN MOHUN SHAHA v. 54. Presumption—Creditors claiming against benamidar—Evidence.

Although a purchase by a Mahomedan with his own money of an estate in the name of his son raises a presumption of the son's name being used benami for his father, proof that the father's object was to affect the ordinary rule of succession as from him to that property is sufficient to give, as respects strangers, a title to the son independent of, and adverse to, the father. Where bona fide creditors of the ostensible owner of property are claimants on that property, the Court will require strict proof on the part of any one seeking to have it declared that he held it only benami. RUKNADAWLA NOWAB AHMED ALI KHAN v. 55. Proof of beneficial ownership—Presumption from possession on receipt of rents.—Where there are benami transactions, and the question is who is the real owner, the actual possession on receipt of the rents of the property is most important. In a suit against a purchaser at a sale under Act XI of 1859, s. 13, the plaintiff claimed to have an incumbrance by virtue of two mokurari pottahs, executed by the heirs of the last of a series of benamidars, and it appearing that the last benamidar had actual ownership of one-fourth of the property comprised therein, Held that the incumbrance was good to the extent of such fourth. IMAMBANDI BEGUM v. Although the defendant, by his written statement, denied the fact of the purchases being with the widow's money, and it was proved that they were made with her money, Held that this did not remove from the plaintiff the burden of proving that the purchases were made benami for her. CHANDRANATH ROY v. 58. Benami purchase by Hindu or Mahomedan—Property bought by a father in his son's name—Advancement—Presumption—Evidence—Nature of evidence to rebut.—When purchase is made by a Hindu or a Mahomedan in the name of his son, the presumption is in favour of its being a benami purchase; and it lies on the party in whose name it was purchased to prove that he is solely entitled to the legal and beneficial interest in the estate. When the rights of creditors are in issue in such a transaction, very strict proof of the nature of the transaction should be required from the objector to such rights, and the burden of proof lies with more than ordinary weight on the person alleging that the purchase was intended for the benefit of the son. NAGINBHAI v. Subsequently E sold the share to C for valuable consideration. In a suit brought by C for possession, B alleged that his conveyance to E was a benami transaction of which C was cognizant. Held that the onus of showing that was on B, and that, prima facie, C was justified in supposing that E had a good title to convey. SATYA MONI DAS v. with the money of the plaintiff, and afterwards agreed to execute a deed of release in favour of plaintiff, but without doing that he fraudulently executed a deed of sale in favour of defendant No. 1, who had notice of plaintiff's title. In a suit by plaintiff for recovery of possession and declaration of title of the property it was contended that s. 36 of Act XI of 1859 was a bar. Held per MACLEAN, C.J., and GHOSE, J., that s. 36 of Act XI of 1859 is a penal section and ought to be construed strictly and literally, and in construing the section the Court ought not to go beyond the strict letter of the language used or to put a construction upon that language which would have the effect of materially extending the operation of the section. Held further by MACLEAN, C.J., that s. 36 is no bar to the suit, inasmuch as this is not a suit "to oust the certified purchaser," but to oust somebody else, although he claims through the former; and the true ground upon which the suit is based is the fraud of defendant No. 2, of which defendant No. 1 had notice. Held per GHOSE, J., that the suit might well be regarded as based upon the ground of fraud, and in this view of the matter the case falls outside the provisions of s. 36 of the Revenue Sale Law. Buhans Kowar v. Per TREVELLAN, J. (dissenting)—S. 36 of Act XI of 1859 applies just as much to a suit to oust the assignee of a certified purchaser as it does to a suit to oust that purchaser. The Legislature, in enacting s. 36, intended to give to a certified purchaser in possession a statutory title against the person, if any, on whose behalf he had purchased, and therefore this protection should devolve upon his heir or assignee who would take a title in continuation of that of the certified purchaser. RAJ CHUNDER CHUCKERBUTY v. In a suit by B to compel specific performance of the contract, alleging that he had never quitted actual possession of the talukhat, objection was taken that the suit was not maintainable under s. 36 of Act XI of 1859 and s. 317 of Act XIV of 1882. MUTHOORA NATH DASS v. RAJESOMUL DOSSEE [24 W. R., 278]

96. ————— Civil Procedure Code, s. 317—Suit by purchaser at sale in execution of decree.—At a sale in execution of a decree, in February 1875, the plaintiff purchased certain property in the name of M, who was recorded as the purchaser. In 1886, eleven years after the execution-sale, M sold the property to H, whose name was subsequently registered as owner, notwithstanding the plaintiff's objections. The plaintiff thereupon, in 1888, brought a suit against H for a declaration of his title to the property on the grounds that it had originally been purchased on his behalf at the execution-sale, and that he had been in possession for more than twelve years.—Held that the suit did not fall within s. 317 of the Civil Procedure Code. Buhuns Koonwur v. 106. ——— Civil Procedure Code (1852), s. 317.—Benami transaction.—Fraud.—Suit against purchaser buying benami.—Sale certificate granted in name of benamidar.—Certain property belonging to a judgment-debtor was brought to sale and purchased by a person in the benami name of her daughter, then an infant, and the sale certificate was made out in the name of the latter. Subsequently the mother mortgaged the property, and the mortgagee brought a suit, obtained a decree, and had the property sold and purchased it himself. Upon his being retained by the daughter in attempts to get his name registered as proprietor, he instituted a suit against both mother and daughter to establish his rights to the property. The daughter thereupon objected that such suit would not lie by reason of the provisions of s. 317 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that the provisions of that section, which were intended to prevent fraud, were inapplicable to the Civil Procedure Code (1882), s. 317—Benami purchase at execution-sale for judgment-debtor—Remedy of subsequent purchaser for sale—Misjoinder of parties.—In a suit to redeem a kamra bought by the plaintiff who had purchased the land in execution of a decree against the joint, it appeared that the land had previously been purchased in the name of one who was joined as a supplementary defendant, with the funds of the joint's assets, and with the object of defrauding the creditors of that firm. A decree for redemption was passed, which was reversed on appeals filed by the supplementary defendant and the kamrar respectively. The plaintiff preferred a second appeal against the decree in the first-mentioned appeal, joining the kamrar as respondent. Held that the plaintiff could not succeed, as the kamrar was not a party to the appeal against which the second appeal was preferred. Scamble, apart from the above objection, the plaintiff was not entitled to a declaration that the purchase by the supplementary defendant was benami for the firm of the original joint and consequently invalid as against the plaintiff. Kanizak Sakina v. Civil Procedure Code (1882), s. 317—Suit by execution-creditor for declaration that property is liable to be sold in execution of decree as belonging to his debtor.—The plaintiff lent money to F on a bond, and after his death sued his representative to recover the money out of the decedent's assets, and obtained a decree in execution of which he attached certain property. S preferred a claim to the property on the ground that she was the purchaser of it at an execution-sale, and it was released. The plaintiff then brought a suit against S and F's representative for a declaration that the property was the property of his debtor F, and was therefore liable to be sold in execution of his decree. Held that the suit was not barred by s. 317 of the Civil Procedure Code. Kanizak Sakina v. Civil Procedure Code (1882), ss. 317 and 214—Purchase by a benamidar with funds belonging to a joint Hindu family—Right of member of family not being a party to benami transaction to sue for his share.—A Hindu sued for partition of his share of the family property, and obtained a decree, which he partially executed. He then died without issue, leaving a widow. The rest of the family remained undivided, and the plaintiff was born into it after the decree was passed. Some of the members of the family arranged for the purchase of the late decree-holder's property with their money benami for them, and for a similar purchase of other portions of the family property at Court-sales held a further execution of the decree. The plaintiff now sued for partition of, inter alia, those portions of the family property which had been the subject of the benami transaction. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to share therein, and was not precluded from asserting his right by Civil Procedure Code, s. 214 or s. 317. MINAKSHI ANMAL v. Civil Procedure Code (1882), s. 317—Sale in execution of decree—Right to prove purchase benami.—Certain property was mortgaged in 1881 and again in 1882. In 1883 the interest of one of the mortgagors in the property was brought to sale subject to the mortgages in execution of a decree against him, and was purchased by the assignor of defendant No. 6. In 1884 a decree for sale was obtained on the mortgage of 1882, neither defendant No. 6 nor his assignor having been brought on to the record. In execution of that decree, the property now in question was purchased by the predecessor in title of the plaintiff, who now brought this suit for redemption, averring that the purchase of 1883 was benami for the mortgagors. Held that the plaintiff was not debarred by the Civil Procedure Code, s. 317, from proving this averment. KOLANTAVIDA MANIKOTH ONAKKAN v. Defendant acted benami in buying certain land at a Court-sale for plaintiff, paid part of the purchase-money for plaintiff, and allowed plaintiff to remain in possession on the understanding that defendant was to transfer the property on repayment of the balance of the purchase-money. J.—The operation of s. 184 of Act No. XIX of 1873 is not confined to disputes between certified auction-purchasers and persons who allege that such auction-purchasers purchased on their behalf as their benamidars, but extends to cases where the dispute is between the certified purchasers and third persons who allege that the certified purchasers are not the real purchaser. In such a case the claimants cannot succeed without proof of fraud. Buhuns Kowur v. Lalla Buhoree Lall, 14 Moore's I. A., 496, Sohun Lall v. Lala Gya Pershad, 6 N. W., 265, Kanizak Sukina v. Per BANERJI, J.—S. 184 of Act XIX of 1873 contemplates a suit between the person claiming to be the real purchaser and the certified purchaser, and not a suit by a creditor of such person in which the creditor seeks to establish that the purchase was in reality made by his debtor, and that the certified purchaser is only the benamidar of the debtor. S. 184 does not preclude a creditor of the beneficial owner from suing the certified purchaser on the allegation that his purchase was benami for the debtor, and that the latter is the real purchaser. Buhuns Kowur v. Sale in execution of decree for arrears of Cess—Procedure—Purchasers, Rights of.—Although the procedure for the realization of cesses may be the same as the procedure laid down for the realization of rent due upon the tenure, yet it does not necessarily follow that the effect of a sale for cesses should be the same as that of a sale for arrears of rent for which the tenure itself is liable to be sold. *Umachurn Bag v. Notwithstanding, therefore, that s. 47 of the Cess Act, 1880, provides that "every holder of an estate or tenure to whom any sum may be payable under the provisions of this Act may recover the same with interest at the rate of twelve and a half per centum per annum in the same manner and under the same penalties as if the same were arrears of rent due to him," the effect of a sale by the Collector in execution of a decree for cesses against some of the owners of a tenure is not to convey to the purchaser the whole tenure, but only the right, title, and interest of the particular persons against whom the decree had been obtained. *MAHANUND CHUOKERBUTTY v. their cause of action as arising when the Municipal Commissioners refused to remove the stones. Defendants' case was that the land had been in possession of Government till Bengal Act III of 1864 was extended to Howrah, since which time the Commissioners had held the land. Held that the cause of action could not be considered to have arisen on the refusal of the Municipality to remove the stones. Held (by BAYLEY, J.) that the Municipal Commissioners had acted properly under the law, and were entitled to the application of s. 87, Bengal Act III of 1864. Held (by PHEAR, J.) that s. 87 could only protect defendants if sued for damages consequent on a wrong done by them in the reasonable belief that they were exercising their lawful powers; not if they were sued by parties kept out of possession by their continued wrong-doing. After the dismissal of the suit, the plaintiff brought the present suit for recovery of his share of the land, on the allegation that his tenant had relinquished the land within three months in consequence of his having been dispossessed by the Municipal Commissioners. Held that s. 87, Bengal Act III of 1864, did not apply. Semble—Bengal Act III of 1864, s. 87, relates only to actions brought in respect of acts done by the Commissioners under that Act for the purpose of the Act. one horse. On the 8th May the Chairman of the Municipality passed an order directing C to be prosecuted for making a false statement in the schedule to his statement regarding the number of animals in respect of which he applied for the license. On the 9th May C presented a petition asking that the tax on the three animals might be received, and stating that he did not think he was liable to take out a license for them, as they were old and diseased and unfit for work. On the 13th May the Chairman passed an order on this application that he had no power to interfere, as the prosecution of C had already been ordered. Meanwhile on the 9th May a paper was sent to the Magistrate headed "List of municipal cases under Act III of 1884" in which C appeared as charged with an offence under s. 199 of the Penal Code for "filing a false statement, that is to say, putting down in the schedule six ponies only instead of eight ponies and one horse." On the 12th May the Deputy Magistrate directed a summons to issue to C, returnable on the 23rd. On the 18th May the District Magistrate passed an order to the effect that the Municipality could not institute a prosecution under the Penal Code, but that the Deputy Magistrate had power to do so, and that he should consider the provisions of ss. 182 and 417, read with s. 511, of the Penal Code as applicable to the facts of the case. On the 19th May the summons was issued, and the case was heard on the 23rd and 24th May and 19th June, on which date formal charges under ss. 199, 182, and 417—511 of the Penal Code were framed. Thereafter the hearing proceeded till the 16th July, when, on an application to the High Court, the proceedings were stayed, and a rule issued to show cause why they should not be quashed. It was contended at the hearing of that rule that the High Court should not interfere at that stage of the proceedings under its revisional jurisdiction. Held that the High Court has power to interfere at any stage of a case, and that, when it is brought to its notice that a person has been subjected, as in this case, for over two months to the harassment of an illegal prosecution, it is its bounden duty to interfere. Held, further, that it was quite clear that the Municipality had no power to institute the proceedings, and that, having regard to the provisions of s. 191 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, it did not appear that the Deputy Magistrate, having no private complainant before him, had power of his own motion to institute them; but that, whether he had such power or not, the admitted facts of the case did not in law constitute any of the offences with which C was charged, and that the whole proceedings must be quashed. The Municipal Act is intended to be complete in itself as regards offences committed against the Municipal Commissioners, and there is no indication of any intention to render a delinquent also liable to punishment under the Penal Code. There is no penalty in the Act attached to the omission to make a return under s. 133, and no words in the Act constituting the making a false return a penal offence; and as there are no such words in the Act as are necessary to make the provisions of the Penal Code applicable, the Court has no power to import ss. 155 and 156—Ferry, Meaning of—Boat plying for hire without license within prescribed limits of ferry—Right of ferryman to demand tolls.—The expression "a ferry" in the Bengal Municipal Act means the exclusive right to carry passengers across the stream from one bank to the other on payment of certain prescribed tolls. The object of s. 155 of that Act appears to be to prevent the crossing of passengers from one bank of the river to the opposite bank by a boat plying for hire without a license within the prescribed limits. Semble, therefore, that the mere crossing of the bar of a khal leading into the limits of a municipal ferry would not constitute a breach of the Act. A ferryman has no authority to demand tolls from persons who are merely passengers in an unlicensed boat. The remedy against the person who keeps a ferry-boat without a license plying within the prescribed limits is provided by s. 156 of that Act. GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL v. SENAYAT ALI I. L.  ing as interest a sum larger than the principal) is not applicable to a suit instituted after the passing of Act XXVIII of 1855. Even under Regulation XV of 1793 it was the practice of the Court to allow interest in excess of principal where the interest had accumulated owing to reasons not ascribable in any degree to procrastination on the part of the creditor.

Village chowkidar, Liability to pay wages of—Land-owner.—A liability on the part of a landholder to pay the wages of a village chowkidar appointed under s. 21, Regulation XX of 1817, cannot be inferred from the fact that the chowkidar's salary was fixed by the heads of the village, and apportioned among the several house-holders without objection made by any of them, but must be proved in order to sustain a suit brought by the chowkidar against the landholder. GOLAMER v. IV, c. 85, s. 43.—Regulation III of 1818 was applicable only to natives and those subject to the jurisdiction of the provincial Courts. It was passed under 37 Geo. III, c. 142, s. 28, not 13 Geo. III, c. 63, s. 36. It was passed by a legislative authority having full power in that behalf. Considering the circumstances under which it was enacted, Act III of 1858, which extended the effect of that Regulation to Calcutta, was not ultra vires. IN THE MATTER OF AMBER KHAN

The detention, to be legal, need only be covered by an actually existing warrant of the Governor General in Council in the form prescribed, without regard to the lawfulness of the arrest. The Regulation is not confined to prisoners of war or foreigners held in confinement for political reasons. The substance of Regulation III of 1818 was expressly re-enacted by Act XXXIV of 1850 and Act III of 1858, and therefore, as the result of these later Acts alone, the detention would be legal. These Acts are not contrary to the power conferred on the Indian Legislature by 3 & 4 Will. IV, c. 85, s. 43. IN THE MATTER OF AMBER KHAN

—Assessment of land formerly occupied for Government salt-works.

—Upon the relinquishment by the Government of lands, within the ambit of a permanently-settled zamindari, continuously used before and since the perpetual settlement of salt-works from the commencement of salt-making by the Government, until after the passing of Regulation I of 1824, the provisions of that Regulation are applicable to the mutual rights of the zamindar and of the Government. Such lands were held by the officers of the Salt Department, in terms of cl. 11 of that Regulation, "free of rent" and "under a perpetual title of occupancy," whether belonging to a permanently-settled estate or not. The force of the Regulation and the right of the Government to assess such lands are not affected by 'khalari,' payments having been made, among other compensations, by the Government to the zamindar; and cl. 11 appears to contemplate some such payment. On a settlement of the relinquished lands, 'khalari' payments, being "sums remitted to the zamindars and to be allowed in perpetuity" within the meaning of cl. 4 of s. 9 of Regulation I of 1824, must be continued to the zamindar; or, if a settlement should be made with others, he should be assessed only for the

4. ———— Suit to recover excess of rent—Act X of 1859, ss. 10 and 23, cl. 2—Exaction of sum in excess of rent.—Contemporaneously with the execution of a pottah, it was verbally agreed that the tenant should supply the zamindar with a certain quantity of rice, and that a deduction should be made from the rent reserved in respect thereof. The zamindar took proceedings against the tenant, under Regulation VIII of 1819, for the recovery of the entire amount of rent, notwithstanding the tenant had supplied the rice and was entitled to the reduction. The tenant, without contesting his liability, or demanding an investigation as to the amount due, paid the entire amount. Held that this was not "an exaction from the raiyat of a sum in excess of the rent specified in the pottah" within the meaning of s. 10, Act X of 1859 (Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 11), and that a suit was not maintainable in respect of it under the Rent Act. CHUNDER-MONEE CHOWDRAIN v. The present suit was brought for the excess rent levied from plaintiff between the date of taking possession and of the Act X decree. Held that, if the suit did lie at all, it would be a suit for an illegal exaction of rent, and should be brought under the Rent Act. SURBO CHUNDER DOSS v. 9. ———— Suit to recover money deposited to pay rents.—A suit to recover money deposited with the defendants to be applied in payment of rents (the deposit having been unsuccessfully pleaded in a suit for rent) should not be brought under the Rent Act. DABEE GOLAM SINGH v. 81. — Suit against person entitled to rent for wrongful ejectment—Act X of 1859, s. 23, cl. 6.—A, after the grant of a pottah of the same land to B, fraudulently granted a pottah of the same land to his own daughter, and by means thereof she intervened in a suit by B against a raiyat for rent, and prevented B from recovering in the suit. Held that this was evidence to support a suit by B against A under Act X of 1859, s. 23, cl. 6, for illegally ejecting him from the tenure, and the pottah being a mere device. Notwithstanding the daughter was joined as a defendant in the suit, the suit could be entertained under the Rent Act. HUREE DYAL CHUKKEE v. BRJESSUREE DOSSEE [Marsh., 604]

The suit was first brought in the Revenue Court, and as their co-sharers had not joined in the suit, the plaintiffs made them defendants, and their being defendants preventing the plaintiffs from continuing the suit in the Revenue Court, they instituted it afresh in

s. 1, Act VIII of 1859, and that six years' rent could be decreed. Held, on special appeal to the High Court, that the fact of the co-sharers being made pro forma defendants did not alter the real character of the suit, which was to recover arrears of rent, and that, therefore, the provisions of s. 29, Act VIII of 1859, were applicable, and a decree for three years' rent only was given. GHNOA GOSWID SEN v. Whereupon, in 1285, more than three years from the time the rent of 1281 became due, the son was made a defendant. It appeared that from the time of her husband's death A had allowed her own name to remain on the sherista of the plaintiffs, and that the plaintiffs had no notice of the adoption. Held, reversing the decision of the lower Appellate Court, that the claim for the rent for the year 1281 was not barred as against A and the tenure, but that no decree could be made against the son in respect of it. Dwarkanath Mitter v. Rent having become due under this condition on certain lands which had not been in a state of cultivation at the time of the making of the lease, the lessee deposited in Court, as the entire rent payable in respect of the talukh, the same amount as he had paid in previous years. In a suit brought a year after the lessor had notice of such deposit, to recover the entire rent payable in respect of the lands newly brought into cultivation, Held that such suit, having been instituted more than six months after service of notice of such deposit on the lessee, was barred under s. 31 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869. RAM SUNKER SENAPUTTY v. 9. ———— Act X of 1859, s. 78—Forfeiture for default in payment of rent.—Plaintiff sued defendant under cl. 5, s. 23, Act X of 1859, for direct or khas possession of a farm (for which the latter had paid a bonus), stating that the contract between them was that, on default in payment of the farming rent as per kistbundi, a suit was to be instituted for the arrears, and in execution of the decree the lease was to be forfeited, and the plaintiff, the lessor, entitled to enter upon khas possession, unless the amount was paid within 15 days. It was further urged that defendants, the lessees, had defaulted; that plaintiff had obtained decrees; and that defendants, having failed to pay within fifteen days, had violated the lease and were liable to be ejected. Held that the terms of the contract were in strict accordance with the provisions of s. 78, Act X of 1859, and the plaintiff ought to have brought his suit under that section, and obtained a decree for ejectment. Upon non-payment of rent for the year 1281, a suit for khas possession of the lands was brought against A and B. The defendants claimed an equitable right to prevent forfeiture by paying all arrears according to the terms of the dar-patni, together with all costs. Held that, whether or not the provisions of the Rent Law actually applied to the case, the Court was bound by the analogy of that law to apply in favour of the defendants an equity similar to the equity there given, and accordingly a decree was passed, that if the defendants should pay the whole of the rent due up to date, with interest according to the conditions of the dar-patni, together with the costs in the High Court and Courts below, they should be released from the effect of the forfeiture. On 24th October following, an order was passed for talabana to be deposited within seven days, but before that time expired (i.e., on 27th October), the case was struck off by an order which was not appealed against. The next execution process was taken out on the 6th December 1873. Held that, as the last process, being for a set-off, was not of the same nature as the first, which was for attachment of property, it could not be considered to be a carrying out of the former; and as the order of 27th October 1873 remained uncanceled, the decree was barred under the Rent Law, s. 58. AKBAM SHERE v. On the 18th July 1881, the decree-holders applied for execution of the decree. Held by the majority of the Full Bench (GARTH, C.J., and MITTER, J., dissenting) that the application was barred by limitation under the provisions of s. 58, Bengal Act VIII of 1869. Gureebullah Sircar v. Suit for value of crops—Distraint—Jurisdiction—Small Cause Court.—The plaintiff made a complaint to the Magistrate against the defendant, his landlord, for forcibly carrying away his crops; whereupon the defendant was tried, convicted of theft, and punished. The plaintiff then instituted a suit against the defendant in the Munsif's Court, apparently under s. 95 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, and obtained a decree declaring the distraint to be illegal, and directing the crops to be given up to him. The defendant offered to give up a smaller quantity than was mentioned in the decree. The plaintiff refused to take the same, and brought a suit in the Small Cause Court to recover the value of the quantity he had claimed before the Munsif and something additional. Held that the Small Cause Court had no jurisdiction, and that the suit ought to have been brought under s. 98 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869. HYDER ALI v. [25 W. R., 103]

21. ————— Special appeal—Question as to whether rent has varied.—Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 102, does not apply where the point decided is simply whether the rent fixed by a previous decision has been subsequently altered and a new arrangement come to. NURUDESSUR PERSHAD ROY v. JUNGLE

22. ————— Special appeal—Question as to variation of rent.—In a suit for arrears of rent under R100, in which the question was whether the landlord had the right to raise and had raised the rent, and the Judge decided that there had been no alteration in the rent, — Held no appeal lay to the High Court. ROY JUNG BAHADOOR v. 24. ————— Special appeal—Co-sharer—Suit for rent.—The plaintiff, one of several co-sharers of a talukh, sued to recover her share of rent, making her co-sharers, who resisted her claim, defendants. The first Court raised and tried questions of title between the plaintiff, her co-sharers, and the raiyat, and decided in favour of the plaintiff. The lower Appellate Court, without expressing any opinion on the rights of the parties, dismissed the suit on the ground that it was not maintainable. On special appeal, it was contended that no appeal would lie, as the amount of the claim was less than R100, and no question of title was determined by the judgment; but this objection was overruled on the ground that the decree of the lower Appellate Court, dismissing the suit, had the effect of deciding the question of title against the plaintiff. On appeal under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent, — Held that the judgment, rather than the decree, is to be looked at in applying s. 102, Bengal Act VIII of 1869. No appeal lay from the judgment of the lower Appellate Court, inasmuch as that judgment showed not only that no question of title was determined, but that the Judge did not even consider it. KARIM SHEIKH v. 37. ————— Special appeal—Rent suit under R100—Title.—A and B, both of whom set up a claim to certain land, brought separate rent suits against the tenants. In none of these suits did the amount claimed exceed R100. Subsequently to the institution of the rent suits, A sued B to establish his title to the land in dispute. The District Judge, before whom the rent suits came on appeal, allowed them to stand over until the decision in the suit between A and B. That suit was decided in favour of B, and the Judge then decided the rent suits instituted by B in his favour, and dismissed the suits instituted by A. Held that no second appeal would lie in the rent suits, as no question of title between parties having conflicting claims was decided in them. DOORGA NARAIN SEN v. The defendant appealed to the District Judge, who decided that the defendant had paid the rent, and reversed the decision of the Court below. The plaintiffs appealed to the High Court, but were met with the objection that no special appeal would lie. Held that s. 102 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869 prohibited the appeal, the case being one between landlord and tenant, and there consequently being no question relating to title as between parties having conflicting claims. ROMAPROSAD ROY v. Bengal Tenancy Act refers to enhancement after the promulgation of the Act, if in this case the enhancement which was made in the year 1835 was before the Act came into force, it would not bar an enhancement during the period of fifteen years from the date thereof as contemplated by cl. (3) of s. 29. But if the said enhancement was made after the Act came into force, it would also not bar a subsequent enhancement within fifteen years from the date thereof, as the previous contract was only an oral one and was not effectual and binding upon the defendant.

agreed to be paid is partly enhanced and partly increased rent. Held, further, that having regard to prov. (1) of s. 29, as also the provisions of s. 27, the plaintiff would at any rate (i.e., failing the khablat) be entitled to recover rent at the rate paid by the defendant for more than three years. decree for road cess on.—The word "rent" in s. 65 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, includes road cess payable by the landlord. A tenure-holder granted a usufructuary mortgage of certain lands within his tenure to A, and directed the tenants to pay their rents to him. Subsequently the superior landlord brought a suit for and against the tenure-holder, and in execution of his decree sold the tenure under s. 65 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. A then brought a suit against one of the tenants for arrears of rent, and contended that all that passed under the auction-sale was the right, title, and interest of the tenure-holder, and that his rights under the mortgage were unaffected by the sale, and that he was still entitled to the rent. Held that Ch. XIV of the Bengal Tenancy Act must be read with s. 65 of the Act, and that, having regard to the definition in cl. 5 of s. 3, "rent," as used in that section, includes road cess payable by the tenant, and that the sale was a sale of the tenure, the purchaser acquiring the property free from the incumbrance created by the tenure-holder in favour of A, it not being a registered and notified incumbrance within the meaning of s. 161 of the Act. *NOMIN CHAND NUKAR v. Acquisition of land by landlord—Reasonable and sufficient purpose—Certificate of Collector—Jurisdiction and functions of the Civil Court.—The proprietors of a taluk who had constructed an indigo factory and employed a European manager applied to the Civil Court, under s. 84 of the Tenancy Act, to acquire by compulsory sale a small piece of land made up of several rayati holdings within the estate. The application was opposed by the proprietors of another indigo factory who had taken under leases from the rayats the greater part of the lands of the village, including the holdings within which the plot in question was comprised. The Collector of the district had certified under s. 84 that the purpose for which the land was required was reasonable and sufficient. The Munsif tried the matter as a disputed question of fact, and held that the purpose alleged was not reasonable or sufficient, and declined to authorize the purchase. The District Judge on appeal reversed the Munsif's finding and authorized the compulsory acquisition of the land. Held that there is no appeal against an order passed by a Civil Court under s. 84 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and that the order of the District Judge was without jurisdiction and must be set aside. Held by PARSEER and AMAR ALI, JJ. (PETHURAM, C.J., dissenting).—That the Collector's certificate under s. 84 is not conclusive as to the reasonableness and sufficiency of the purpose for which the land is sought to be acquired; that the jurisdiction of the Civil Court is not confined to giving effect to the Collector's certificate, but the Court is to hold a judicial enquiry to determine the reasonableness and sufficiency of the purpose and all matters coming within the section, and is competent to consider the grounds upon which the certificate was granted; that the appointment of a European manager and the necessity for erecting buildings for his comfort and convenience are insufficient grounds for authorizing the compulsory acquisition of land under s. 81. The purpose for which the land is sought to be acquired must have a direct relation to the good of the holding, and objects which might have a remote or speculative bearing upon the good of the holding are foreign to the scope of the Act. Held by PETHERAM, C.J.—The section gives to the Collector jurisdiction to decide whether the alleged purpose is reasonable and sufficient, leaving to the Civil Court to settle the amount to be paid for the land, and the decision of the question whether the land is bona fide required for the alleged purpose. The words "satisfied on the certificate" mean that the Civil Court is to be satisfied on the certificate alone, and has no jurisdiction to take other evidence on that question, but is to accept the decision of the Collector as final. One of the defendants appeared and pleaded that the tenure had been some time previously divided by the principal plaintiff (who was the karta of the family and collected the rent), and that after the division he had paid Rs 7.8 per annum, being the rent in respect of his half of the tenure, to the karta; in support of such payments, he produced dakhilas or rent receipts signed by the karta. The suit was dismissed by the Munsif, but on appeal the Additional Judge gave the plaintiffs a decree for the amount of rent claimed less the amount proved to have been paid by the defendant, who contested the suit, as shown by the dakhilas. He held that

He applied under Ch. X of the Bengal Tenancy Act for the measurement of the estate and the preparation of a record-of-rights, and the Revenue Officer deputed for these purposes found that a portion of the estate held by the defendant was mal land, though it was held as lakhiraj under certain sanads, and as he also found that no rent had ever been paid for it, it was entered on the record-of-rights as mal land held under those sanads as lakhiraj. The Special Judge, on appeal by the plaintiff, held that the land, having been found to be mal, should have been entered as mal land unassessed with rent. In a suit to have the land assessed with rent, it was found that the sanads, under which the defendant claimed to hold, were granted not by any predecessor in title of the plaintiff, and were of a date anterior to the Permanent Settlement. Held (reversing the decision of the lower Appellate Court) that the Special Judge had no jurisdiction to determine whether the land was mal or lakhiraj, and that his judgment as to its being mal did not therefore operate

s. 120, sub-s. 2—Record of proprietor's land as private land—Grounds for determining land to be private—Evidence.—In enacting sub-s. (2) of s. 120 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the Legislature had before it the attempts which might be expected on the part of landlords to frustrate the intention of the Legislature, as asserted in the draft Bill laid before the Council for consideration, to extend the occupancy-rights of tenants before the measures then declared to be in contemplation became law; and therefore the particular date, the 2nd day of March 1883, the date on which the draft Bill was published in the Gazette, and leave was obtained to introduce the Bill into the Council, was declared to be the latest date on which there should be free action on the part of zamindars to assert their private rights, so as to prevent the accrual of special tenant rights. From the wording of that sub-section, it was intended that, in determining whether land is the private land of the proprietor, regard should be had to any declaration made before the 2nd March 1883 by the landlord, and communicated to the tenants, in respect to the reservation of the proprietor's right over the land as his private land: the words "any other evidence that may be produced" in that sub-section mean, therefore, any other evidence tending in the same direction that may be produced to show the assertion of any title on the part of the proprietor and communicated to the tenant before that date. *NILMONI CHUCKERBUTTI v. Before the Bengal Tenancy Act of 1885 came into operation, a decree for rent was obtained under Bengal Act VIII of 1809. 5. ———— and s. 162—Setting aside sale—"Decree," Meaning of.—The word "decree," in s. 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, no doubt primarily refers to the decree of which execution is sought for; but if in the meantime, that is to say, before the sale is actually held, the decree of the first Court, of which execution was applied for, is modified in appeal in favour of the judgment-debtor, then necessarily "the decree" must be the decree of the Appellate Court. So where a decree for rent was passed by the first Court on the 11th January, and in execution of the decree the defaulting tenure was sold on the 5th June, but in the meantime the decree had been modified by the Appellate Court on the 18th May,—Held that the judgment-debtor could set aside the sale by depositing within 30 days from the date of sale the amount covered by the decree of the Appellate Court, together with a sum equal to five per centum of the purchase-money. BHUKI SINGH v. Subsequently on its being discovered that the amount was short by a small sum, the calculation being incorrect, the Munsif held that the provisions of the section had not been complied with, and passed an order confirming the sale. Held that, when the amount payable by the judgment-debtor under s. 174 has been calculated and settled by an officer of the Court, and when that amount has been paid into Court, an order setting aside the sale must be made by the Court as a matter of right. The order of the Munsif confirming the sale was therefore without jurisdiction, and must be set aside. UGRAH LALL v. RADHA PERSHAD SINGH [I L. R., 18 Calc., 255]

Subsequently it was discovered that the amount was short by 9 pies, which the judgment-debtor forthwith paid in, making up the deficiency, and presented a petition, praying that "the execution case may be declared as finally closed," but without applying in express terms to have the sale set aside. Held that, under s. 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the Court was bound to set aside the sale, notwithstanding that the applicant did not in express terms ask for that relief. Ugrah Lall v. When, therefore, the plaintiffs, who are joint landlords, have, in suits separately instituted by them against the defendant tenant, asked for apportionment of rent and for recovery of rents due on such apportionment, and all the parties interested have been made parties to the suits, there is no reason why the plaintiffs should not have the rent apportioned; and the apportionment may take place in respect both of the arrears alleged to be due and the future rent. *RAJNARAIN MITTER v. 1. ——— sch. III, art. 2—Limitation—Suit for arrears of rent at excess rate.—In 1865 the plaintiff sued and obtained a decree for payment of additional rent for excess land held by the defendant, and, on the 29th March 1877, instituted another suit against the defendant for khas possession of newly-accreted lands, or, in the alternative, for an assessment of rent thereon according to the terms of the defendant's kabuliat. This suit was dismissed on the 29th June 1881; but, on appeal to the High Court, this decision was reversed on the 11th May 1883, and khas possession was given to the plaintiff. On appeal, the Privy Council, on the 24th July 1886, reversed the decree for khas possession, and declared the plaintiff entitled to a decree, fixing the extent of the excess lands and assessing rent therefor in terms of the kabuliat, such rent to be payable from and after the 28th March 1878, and remitting the case for a finding as to the extent of the excess lands. The Subordinate Judge, to whom the case was remitted, gave the plaintiff a decree on the 21st March 1887 for increased rent in respect of 2 kanis 7 gun-dahs 2 cowries of excess land. On the 14th July 1887, the plaintiff instituted a suit to recover excess rent for the years 1878 to 1886, and for rent at the old rate plus the excess rent for a portion of the year 1887. Held that the suit, so far as the rent for 1878 to 1883 was concerned, was barred by limitation. *HURRO KUMAR GHOSE v. III of that Act. The words "final decree" in art. 6, sch. III of the Bengal Tenancy Act, refer to the final decree in the suit, and cannot be held to include an order of an Appellate Court made in an application to set aside that decree under s. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure. An ex-parte rent decree having been obtained on the 30th May 1888 for a sum under Rs500, the decree-holder on the 27th May 1889 applied for execution thereof and attached certain properties of the judgment-debtor, the date fixed for the sale being the 31st August 1889. The judgment-debtor applied, under s. 108 of the Civil Procedure Code, for a re-hearing of the rent suit, and on the day fixed for the sale applied for stay of execution: the sale was stayed, and the Court of its own motion and for its own convenience directed the execution case to be struck off the file "for the present." On the 28th December 1889 the Court passed an order refusing a re-hearing of the suit, which order was upheld on appeal on the 16th May 1890. On the 21st January 1892 the decree-holder again applied for execution, at the same time praying that his application might be taken to be in continuation of his former application of the 27th May 1889. Held that the application was one in continuation of the former proceedings in execution so far, at least, as regarded the property mentioned in the former application, but as regards other properties, it must be held to be barred as not having been made within three years from the decree of the 30th May 1888. *BAIKANTA NATH MITTRA v. The Court held on the evidence that the deed was proved, and that in this caste a husband was for a sufficient reason, such as incontinence, allowed to divorce his wife; that the deed in the present case had not been executed for a sufficient reason; and that, consequently, the parties entering into a second marriage were guilty of an offence under s. 494 of the Penal Code (XLIV of 1860); and that the priest who officiated at that marriage was an abettor under ss. 494 and 109. the Roman Catholic Church and married by B, a priest, to a Roman Catholic during the lifetime of her Hindu husband. Held that A's marriage with the Hindu was subsisting and valid at the time of her Christian marriage; that she was guilty of the offence of bigamy; and that B was guilty of abetting that offence. *LOPEZ v. [I. L. R., 4 Bom., 330]

10. ——— Marriage with Mahomedan—Mahomedan Law—Marriage—Penal Code, s. 494.—The petitioner, originally a Hindu woman and the illegitimate offspring of Chattri parents, was duly married according to Hindu rites to D, who was also by caste a Chattri. Subsequent to the marriage, the petitioner became a convert to Mahomedanism and married a Mahomedan. She was charged with and convicted of an offence under s. 494 of the Penal Code. It was contended on her behalf that (1) the marriage between her and D was invalid under Hindu law by reason of her illegitimacy and the consequent difference of caste between the contracting parties; (2) the marriage between her and D became dissolved under the Hindu law on her conversion to Mahomedanism; and (3) the second marriage was not void under the Mahomedan law by reason of its taking place in the lifetime of D, and that the conviction was therefore erroneous. There was no evidence of any notice having been given to D previous to the second marriage calling on him to become a Mahomedan. Held that illegitimacy under Hindu law is no absolute disqualification for marriage, and that, when one or both contracting parties to a marriage are illegitimate, the marriage must be regarded as valid, if they are recognized by their caste people as belonging to the same caste. Held, also, that there is no authority in Hindu law for the proposition that an apostate is absolved from all civil obligations, and that, so far as the matrimonial bond is concerned, such a view would be contrary to the spirit of that law, which regards it as indissoluble, and that accordingly the marriage between the petitioner and D was not, under the Hindu law, dissolved by her conversion to Mahomedanism. Rahmed Beebees v. Rokeya Beebees, 1 Norton's Leading Cases on Hindu Law, p. 12, dissented from. Held, further, that, as the validity of the second marriage depended on the Mahomedan law, and as that law does not allow a plurality of husbands, it would be void or valid according as the first marriage was or was not subsisting at the time it took place; that no notice having been given to D as required by Mahomedan law pre-

The bill fell due on December 3rd, 1870, which was a Saturday, and on that day the plaintiff sent his jemadar to C N & Co., the acceptors, to present the bill for payment. The bill was taken by A, one of the members of the firm of C N & Co., who gave a cheque for the amount, and took a receipt from the plaintiff's jemadar, striking out the signature of C N & Co. as acceptors, but without the plaintiff's consent. The plaintiff's jemadar took the cheque immediately to the bank, but the bank was closed. Thereupon he returned to C N & Co., and informed them that the bank was closed and demanded cash. The plaintiff alleged that it was then stated that the cheque would be honoured on Monday. The plaintiff's jemadar then went and informed the gomashtha of the plaintiff of what had been done. The plaintiff's gomashtha sent him to the defendant's firm to give him notice of what had taken place. It was alleged that at this interview the defendant's liability was admitted in case the cheque was not honoured, and the plaintiff's jemadar was advised to wait until Monday, the defendant stating that he also had a cheque for Rs. 7,000 from C N & Co. This was denied by the defendant. On Monday, 5th December, the cheque was presented to the bank for payment, and was dishonoured. The plaintiff's gomashtha went to the defendant's kiti, and gave notice of the dishonour of the bill and cheque, and asked him to pay the amount of the bill. The defendant asked for the bill, and the plaintiff's gomashtha went to C N & Co., and brought back the bill, with the name of C N & Co., which had been struck out, replaced. The defendant, seeing the bill was overdue, refused to pay the amount. The cheque was thereupon returned to C N & Co., and the bill retained by the plaintiff, who, on 6th December, caused written notice of dishonour to be given to the defendant. Held that the cheque must be taken to have been merely a conditional payment, and when it was dishonoured, the liability of the original bill revived. Held, also, that reasonable notice of dishonour was given, whether the bill be taken to have been dishonoured on the Saturday or on the Monday. *SOMARIMULL v. In May 1876, A, by letter, agreed to execute a mortgage of a certain portion of his property, consisting of a share in a Privy Council decree, to B, and in the meantime to hold such property at the disposal of B, his successors and assigns. In the month of June 1876, A became unable to meet his liabilities, and in the month of August following executed a conveyance of all his property to the Official Trustee upon trust for the benefit of A's creditors. The bank assented to and executed this deed after it had been assented to and executed by some of the other creditors. The deed did not contain any composition with or release by the creditors, nor any covenant on their part not to sue A. In a suit by the bank against B as acceptor of the bills,—Held that B was not precluded by the provisions of s. 132 of the Contract Act and s. 92 of the Evidence Act from pleading that he was an accommodation acceptor only; but held that the letter of May 1876 constituted a good equitable mortgage, and that B was not thereafter entitled, as against the bank, to the equitable rights of an accommodation acceptor. Held, further, that the trust did not impair the "eventual remedy" of B, and that therefore he

from him more than the amount of the bills, less the proceeds of the goods. Held that the defendant was entitled to credit for the net proceeds of the sale of the goods. The plaintiffs had by the sale already realised part of the amount due to them; and to allow the amount to recover from the defendant the whole amount due on the bills would be to permit them to realize this part of their claim a second time; in that case they would be paid twice.

The bill was on the following terms:—"The New Oriental Bank Corporation, Limited, Mauritius, 29th April 1859. On demand pay this first of exchange (second of same tenor and date being unpaid) to the order of Sullivan Hume, in six hundred and forty rupees for value received. For the New Oriental Bank Corporation, Limited. To the New Oriental Bank Corporation, Limited, Bombay." Held that the bill be registered post to Bombay addressed to the plaintiff. During its transmission it was stolen. On the 15th May it was presented by some person to the defendant's Bank in Bombay bearing a forged endorsement in blank of the plaintiff, and it was paid by the Bank. The plaintiff, as soon as he heard of the loss of the bill, made inquiry at the Bank, and was told that the bill had been paid. On being shown the endorsement, the plaintiff pronounced it to be a forgery, and demanded payment of the bill, which the Bank refused. He thereupon filed this suit against the Bank as drawers of the bill. Held (1) that the document was an "ambiguous instrument" within the meaning of s. 17 of the Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), and that the plaintiff had elected to treat it as a bill of exchange. (2) That, treating the document as a bill of exchange, the defendants, as drawers, were discharged by the payment to the de facto holder who presented it for payment. *SULLEMAN HOSSEIN v. 5. ——— Insufficiency of package—Negligence.—The defendants by a condition annexed to their bill of lading stipulated that they should not be responsible for "leakage or breakage or other consequences arising from the insufficiency of the address or package." The plaintiff shipped for conveyance from Hong-Kong to Bombay certain goods on board a steamer of the defendants in packages which were proved to be insufficient. These goods, in accordance with a condition to that effect contained in the bill of lading, were transhipped at Galle. On their being landed in Bombay, it was found that all the packages were broken, and in a much more damaged condition than is usual in the case of such goods carried from Hong-Kong to Bombay in similar packages. The contents had to a large extent escaped from the packages, but were otherwise uninjured. Held that, under a bill of lading in the above form, the onus of proving that the packages were insufficient and that the injury which they had sustained was the consequence of such insufficiency lay upon the defendants, but that, when the result of the evidence on both sides was to leave it in doubt whether the injury was caused by negligence or was the consequence of the insufficiency of the packages, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. P. & O. STEAM NAVIGATION Co. v. SOMAJI VISHRAM. 5 Bom., O. C., 113

6. ——— Insufficiency of package—Negligence—Mercantile usage, Evidence of.—The defendants carry between Hong-Kong and Bombay. By a condition annexed to their bill of lading they stipulated that they should not be responsible for damage to goods arising from insufficiency of package. The plaintiff shipped certain goods in the defendants' steamer, in packages which, though in fact insufficient, were packages of the kind ordinarily used for the conveyance of such goods from Hong-Kong to Bombay. On their being landed in Bombay, it was found that the packages were more or less broken, and the contents were in some instances injured, and had to a small extent escaped from the packages. In an action brought to recover damages in respect of such injury, it was held that evidence of mercantile usage or of custom would be admissible to show that the words "insufficiency of package" should not be taken in their ordinary sense, but as meaning insufficient according to a special custom of the China trade. Held, also, that the evidence of those packages being ordinary China packages, and of such packages having always been carried by the defendants without objection, was not sufficient, in the absence of proof of negligence, to fix the defendants with liability for damage done to them, there being no proof that it had been the practice either of the defendants or any other ship-owners protected by a or other servants of the Company, or from any dereliction, excepted." The plaintiffs contended that a bill of lading did not relate to or cover the period of loading, and that, even if it did, the exception relied upon in this bill of lading related only to negligence subsequent to the commencement of the voyage. They also contended that the ship was not a ship "reasonably fit for the voyage" within the meaning of the rule laid down in Steel v. The State Line Steamship Company, L. R., 3 App. Cas., 72. In the Small Cause Court judgment was given in plaintiffs' favour. On appeal to the High Court on the case stated, this judgment was reversed. Held that this was not a case in which the rule laid down in Steel v. The State Line Steamship Company, L. R., 3 App. Cas., 72, applied, as there was no question here of any defect inherent in the ship. It was simply a case of negligent and improper stowage. Held, further, following Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Co. v. Baker, 7 Bom., O. C., 158, that the reasonable mode of construing the contract evidenced by a bill of lading was to hold the exceptions to be co-extensive with the liability, and that there was no evidence to be found in this bill of lading of any other intention. Held further that the goods were covered by the bill of lading from the time they were put on board to be loaded; consequently, the defendants were protected from liability under the exemptive clause. *The Duero, L. 12. — Liability for loss—Absence of negligence.—A & Co. at Madras shipped by the B. I. S. N. steamer Maahrotta a box of coral, to be delivered to their Agent M at Bimlipatam. At the time of shipment they declared the value and paid enhanced freight on account of such value. By the bill of lading the company undertook to deliver the case in good order at Bimlipatam to the consignee M, subject to certain conditions annexed. By one of these conditions, if the consignee did not take delivery when the ship was ready to discharge, the goods might be warehoused at the merchant's risk, and the company's liability was to cease when the goods left the ship's side. The consignee did not take delivery at the ship's side, and the company's agent at Bimlipatam took the case to the Custom House, as he was bound to do by the regulations of the port. If the Superintendent of the Custom House had known that the case contained corals, it would have been placed in an inner room, but the company's agent did not know the contents of the case, and therefore was unable to give any such information to the Superintendent. While the case was lying at the Custom House, application was made on plaintiff's behalf to the company's agent for delivery of the case upon the usual guarantee. The agent refused to do so, and the case was with it on the production of the bill in the bill of lading. Afterwards the bill of lading was received SHEPHERD & CO. v. as master of the steam-vessel John Bright, for the safe carriage and delivery of a box addressed to A, which in fact contained diamonds of the value of Rs. 11,670, three rubies, and three emeralds, in all of the value of Rs. 15,940. On the face of the bill of lading was printed, "This bill of lading is issued subject to the following conditions." One condition was that a "written declaration of the contents and value of the goods is required by the owner, and must be delivered by the shipper to the owner's agents with the bills of lading. A wrong description of contents or false declaration of value shall release the owner from all responsibility in case of loss, etc., and the goods shall be charged double freight on the real value, which freight shall be paid previous to delivery." The declaration in this case was contained in the following letter from the shipper to the agent of the shipowner:—"Dear Sir,—Be good enough to give me an order for a small box containing diamonds to the value of about Rs. 14,000, to be shipped on board the steamer John Bright for Calcutta. Yours, etc." The box was lost by the negligence of B or his servants. In a suit by A to recover "the value of the goods, viz., Rs. 14,000,"—Held that all the shipowner was entitled to was that the shipper should make a declaration of what bona fide he believed to be the value. The declaration as to contents was not vitiated by the omission to enumerate all the different species of articles contained in the box. Upon the evidence, the declaration as to the value and nature of the contents was bona fide; therefore A was entitled to recover the value of the diamonds lost. DHUNJEEBOY BYRAMJI MATHA v. 14. — Leakage—Breakage—Damage caused by leakage from other goods.—Piece-goods were carried from London to Bombay under a bill of lading, the exceptions in which protected the master from "leakage, breakage, rust, decay, loss, or damage from machinery, boilers . . . misfeasance, error in judgment, negligence or default of . . . persons in the service of the ship . . . and the ship not being liable for any consequences of causes therein excepted, however originating." The piece-goods, on their arrival in Bombay, were found to be damaged by oil and by chafing,—i.e., by rubbing against other goods in the hold,—but there was no evidence to show how such damage was occasioned. Held that the term "leakage" did not include leakage from other goods on to the piece-goods, nor did "breakage" include damage caused by chafing, and that, as no negligence was proved, the master was not protected by the exception "damage from negligence." GRAHAM v. under the bills of lading either over the ship's side or from lighters, or a store-ship, or custom-house, or warehouse, at merchant's risk." Freight was prepaid in Liverpool. On their arrival at Bombay, the two steamers went into the Prince's Dock, belonging to the Port Trust, and discharged the boilers, by means of the Port Trust cranes, on to the dock wharves. The plaintiff subsequently sent to remove the boilers, but was not allowed by the dock authorities to do so until he had paid to them various sums, amounting in the aggregate to Rs30, on account, as stated in the bill furnished him by the Port Trust, of "landing charges" for the said boilers. The bills also contained certain additional charges for "wharfage." These the plaintiff was ready to pay, but the "landing charges" he paid only under protest, and in order to get possession of his goods, and now sought to recover the same from the defendants, who represented the ship-owners. It was the practice of the Port Trust to recover these charges in all cases from the consignees of goods discharged in their dock, and the charge was said to be levied on all goods landed on the wharves of the dock, whether by the dock's cranes or by the ship's own tackles. The charge was incurred the moment the goods touched the wharf. In their rates, sanctioned by Government, which by their Act the Port Trust were entitled to charge, this charge was called, not a "landing charge," but a "dock and crane" charge. Had the plaintiff been given delivery of these goods in the stream, and afterwards himself landed them at any wharf belonging to the Port Trust in the Port of Bombay, the Port Trust would have sought to have made the same charge for allowing the goods to be landed, whether that was done by their appliances or not. Held that the ship-owner, and not the consignee, was bound to pay these charges, they being in reality charges for work and labour done in and about the landing of the goods—an operation which, under the bills of lading, was within the duty of the ship-owner. Per LATHAM, J.—The ship having elected to discharge in the dock, it was her duty to land the goods on the wharf. Every charge which had to be incurred before that could be done was a charge antecedent to delivery, and one, therefore, which must be paid by the ship-owner. SCOTT v. FINLAY I. L. 21. ———— "Weight, contents, and value unknown"—Act IX of 1856, s. 3—Assignee of bill of lading for value.—A bill of lading purporting to be for 50 tons of coals and containing a printed clause, "weight, contents, and value unknown," and similar words written above the signature of the master, does not amount to an admission by the master that he has received 50 tons of coal on board. Upon the true construction of the Bills of Lading Act (IX of 1856), s. 3, a bill of lading in the above form is not, in the hands of a consignee for value, conclusive evidence against the master of the shipment of 50 tons. *NICOL & CO. v. measurement—Measurement at port of delivery—Discrepancy in measurements—Evidence—Burden of proof—Suit by consignee for excess freight.—K V at Moulmein consigned to the plaintiff at Bombay 135 logs of teak timber shipped on board the defendant's ship. The bill of lading, which was signed by the defendant, described the logs as marked K V, and measuring tons 115-12-10, and it provided for the payment of freight thereon at Bombay, at the rate of Rs17 per ton of 50 cubic feet on right delivery. The last clause of the bill of lading was in the handwriting of the defendant, and was as follows:—"Marks, number, quantity, and measurement unknown: all other conditions as per charter-party." The charter-party was expressed to be between the owners of the ship and Messrs. B of Rangoon as charterers of the whole ship, and provided for the payment of freight "at the rate of Rs18 per ton of 50 cubic feet for all timber, one rate throughout, except 100 tons broken stowage at half freight, by intake measurement." On arrival of the ship at Bombay, the plaintiff, as consignee of the timber and holder of the bill of lading, paid the defendant (the captain of the ship) Rs1,500 on account of freight, and took delivery of the 135 logs. On measuring them he found that, according to his method of measurement, the total measurement of the 135 logs came only to tons 58-27-11-6, and not tons 115-12-10 as mentioned in the bill of lading. He claimed, therefore, to be chargeable with freight only on the smaller quantity (viz., Rs95-8), and to recover from the defendant the difference (viz., Rs504-8) between that sum and Rs1,500 paid on account as for an overpayment of freight. It was proved that all the timber on board had been measured at Moulmein by an employé of the charterers acting apparently as agent of all the different shippers, and that the measurements in the bills of lading were supplied by this person to the defendant as the measurements of the different consignments. It was also proved that the 135 logs received and measured by the plaintiff in Bombay were the same logs that were shipped under the bill of lading, and that the plaintiff's measurement of them was correct according to the mode of measurement which he adopted. There was no evidence as to what was the mode of measurement followed at Moulmein, nor, except the statements in the bill of lading, as to what was the actual intake measurement of the timber there. Held that the effect of the last clause in the bill of lading was to incorporate into that document the clause of the charter-party which provided that freight should be payable on the intake measurement; that the burden of proving what the intake measurement actually was lay upon the plaintiff, who sought to recover back money which he alleged he had paid in excess of what was due; and that, in the absence of such evidence on behalf of the plaintiff, the statement of quantity contained in the bill of lading was prima facie evidence of the intake measurement of the timber. *CURSETJI RUSTOMJI SETNA v. BILL OF LADING—continued.

Burden of proof—"Or otherwise," meaning of.—The plaintiff was the consignee of a large consignment of goods shipped from Bombay in bags on board the defendants' steamship Java for carriage to Zanzibar. On arrival of the Java at Zanzibar, the goods were landed by the defendant company and placed in the customs godown, where the plaintiff in due course demanded delivery. Some of the bags were not forthcoming, but the evidence did not show how the loss had occurred. The bill of lading contained the following condition:—"The Company's liability shall cease as soon as the packages are free of the ship's tackle, after which they shall not be responsible for any loss or damage, however caused. If stored in receiving ship, godown or upon any wharf, all risks of fire, dacoity, vermin or otherwise shall be with the merchant, and the usual charges shall be paid before delivery of the goods. Fire insurance will be covered by the company's agents on application." In a suit brought by the plaintiff for short delivery of goods,—Held that the defendants were liable. They did not show how the loss occurred, and as it might have occurred from causes not covered by the exception (e.g., from misdelivery), they did not bring themselves within the protection afforded by the exemption. The general words "or otherwise" contained in the tenth clause of the bill of lading could not be read so as to cover all possible losses, for that would make them include wilful misconduct on the part of the defendant's servants, and general words are not read with such an extended meaning. Nor would they include misdelivery, for that was provided for in the eighth clause. BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION Co. v. RATANSI RAMJI

29.—Claim for short delivery—Place for preferring claim.—A bill of lading contained a provision that any claim for short delivery or for damage done to goods should be made at the port of Calcutta, and not elsewhere. Held that this clause did not affect the plaintiff's right of suit in the Court at Rangoon, and that, if the defendants meant to object that no claim had been made in Calcutta before the commencement of the suit, they should have done so in proper time, viz., in their written statement. An objection on that ground taken for the first time at the hearing of the appeal was disallowed. BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION Co. v. IBRAHIM MOOSUM . 8 W. R., 35

The defendants were owners of a fleet of steam-ships plying periodically along the coast of British India, by which they undertook to convey for freight parcels of goods for all persons indifferently from and to specified ports. They stipulated in their bills of lading that claims for short delivery should be made at the port of Calcutta only, within one month after delivery, of any portion of the goods entered in the bill of lading. Held, in a suit against defendants for compensation for value of goods short delivered, that this was not an unreasonable stipulation, and that a claim made on the agents of the defendants, who were authorized only to retain the goods, receive freight, and give delivery, was not a sufficient compliance with the condition. Held, also, that defendants were common carriers, though not for the purposes of the Indian Carriers Act, and that their character of carriers continued so long as the goods remained in their hands and undelivered. BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY v. HAJEE MAHOMED ESACK & Co. I. L. R., 3 Mad., 107

31.—Delivery of goods to consignee—Cargo unclaimed on arrival of ship—Rights of ship-owner to land goods—Damages by rain—Madras Harbour Trust Act (Madras Act II of 1886).—The defendant's steamship arrived at Madras on 4th December 1891, bringing bags of grain consigned to the plaintiffs under a bill of lading by which the defendants were to have the option of delivering the goods into a receiving ship or landing them at consignee's risk and expense, and their liability was to cease when the goods were free of the ship's tackle. The plaintiffs, on the date of the arrival of the goods, were not authorized to receive them. The plaintiffs set up a custom that cargo of this description ought to be landed on the beach; but as this could not be done in the absence of the consignees, the defendants landed it the same day on the pier and delivered it into the custody of the Madras Harbour Trust for storage, pending delivery to the consignees. On the 8th of December 1891, heavy rain fell, and on the same date plaintiffs learnt that the cargo had been delivered on the pier. When the plaintiffs came to take delivery on that day, a considerable portion had been damaged by rain, for which they now sued the defendants. Held (1) that where the consignees were unable to take delivery in the ordinary way on the beach, the master of a ship has the option of landing and warehousing the goods, and that delivery to the Harbour Trust for custody was not wrongful; (2) that in the absence of proof that the defendants were negligent, or that they failed to deliver the goods, the suit must be dismissed. BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY v. In the absence of any evidence to show that the accused had manufactured the toddy, or been in possession of a still, or had transported toddy from one place to another, no presumption could be drawn, under s. 53, of any offence described in s. 43. persons who may from time to time be owners of the bhag. S. 3 of the Act does not bar the right of any person prejudicially affected by any illegal sale from suing to set aside the sale. Four brothers owned a bhag in common. In 1-71 the right, title, and interest of three of the brothers in the bhag was sold in execution of decrees against them. The defendants were the auction-purchasers. They were put in joint possession of the whole bhag. In 1878 the plaintiff purchased the whole bhag from the four brothers, and field amsuit in 1833 to oust the defendants, and to obtain possession, alleging that the defendants' purchase of a portion of the bhag was illegal and invalid under s. 1 of the Bombay Bhagdari Act (V of 1862). The suit was dismissed on the ground that, though the defendants' purchase was illegal under the Act, the plaintiff had no right to oust the defendants until the Collector had taken action, under s. 2 of the Act, to set aside the defendants' purchase. Held, reversing the decision of the lower Court, that the suit was not barred by s. 2 of the Bombay Bhagdari Act (V of 1862). Held, also, that the defendants' purchase of unascertained shares in the undivided bhag was not opposed to s. 1 of the Act. BAI KUNVARBAI v. 1. — ss. 1 and 3—San mortgage—Bhagdari and narvadari tenures—Mortgage before passing of the Act—Execution of decree—Operation of Act.—The plaintiff in 1874 sued on a san mortgage, dated 15th November 1861, i.e., five months before the passing of Bombay Act V of 1862, to recover a sum of money by sale of the mortgaged property, which formed part of a bhag in a bhagdari village, which bhag the defendant had purchased at a Court's sale subsequent to the date of the mortgage. Held (assuming s. 1 of the Act to apply) that it does not bar the right of action; that, therefore, a Civil Court would be bound to make a decree, even though it might anticipate that s. 1 of the Act would stand in the way of the execution of that decree. Semble—That, after a decree has been passed against a portion of a bhag, the Collector might recognize such portion as a division of the bhag, if assured that justice required that the decree should be executed. Held, further, that no retrospective operation can be given to s. 1 of the Act, so as prejudicially to affect existing rights. The words "attachment or sale by the process of any Civil Court," used therein, were intended to prevent attachment and sale under simple money-decrees, and not to prevent the sale of mortgaged property in satisfaction of a valid mortgage. RANCHODDAS DOYALDAS v. RANCHODDAS NANABHAI . I. L. R., 1 Bom., 581

2. — Sale of unrecognized portion of bhag—Application by Collector to set it aside—Limitation Acts, IX of 1871 and XV of 1877, sch. II, art. 178.—No law of limitation applies to proceedings taken by a Collector under Bombay Act V of 1862. The words in the first section of that Act, "no portion of a bhag, etc., shall be liable to seizure, sequestration, attachment, or sale by the process of any Civil Court," mean that no portion of a bhag shall be seized, sequestered, attached, or sold by the process of any Civil Court, and any such seizure, sequestration, attachment, or sale is thereby rendered absolutely illegal and void. S. 3 of the Act has no bearing on sales by order of a Civil Court, but is intended to apply to unlawful sales and alienations of portions of bhags made out of Court, or by private individuals. It is under s. 2 that the Collector is authorized and bound to move in order to get the process of a Civil Court set aside or quashed. COLLECTOR OF BROACH v. DESAI RAGHUNATH . I. L. s. 2—Sale of a portion of a bhag in execution of a decree—Process for sale—Collector's right to get the process quashed.—The appellant was the mortgagee of a portion of a bhag under a mortgage dated 1880, and in a suit brought upon the mortgage obtained a decree for sale of the mortgaged property. An attachment was issued, and an order for sale was made. Thereupon the Collector applied, under s. 2 of Bombay Act V of 1862, to set aside the attachment and order for sale. Held that the mortgage of a portion of a bhag was unlawful under s. 3 of the Act, and a process having been issued for the sale of such portion, the Collector was entitled to have it quashed. RANCHODDAS DOYALDAS v. The plaintiff built an "ota" or verandah, and put up a wooden bench in front of his house, which the municipality of the town ordered to be removed. In a suit by the plaintiff to have this order set aside, the District Court found that the occupant of each house had the right of way across the court,

A scheme of taxation drafted by the committee was subsequently adopted by the municipality, and it included a new house and property tax. The municipality then issued a notice with regard to this last-mentioned tax under the provisions of s. 21 of Bombay Act VI of 1873 setting forth the particulars of the proposed tax and requiring objections to be lodged within a fortnight from the date of the notice. A number of objections were received which were laid on the table for twenty-one days for perusal and consideration by the municipal commissioners. At the end of that time a special meeting of the Commissioners was held, at which it was resolved that the objections were invalid, and the scheme and the rules with regard to the levying of the tax were forwarded to Government and were sanctioned. The plaintiffs sued for an injunction restraining the municipality from levying the tax, contending that it was illegal, on the ground (1) that there was no municipality empowered by the Act, inasmuch as the commissioners who passed the resolution to impose the tax did not know for what purpose the tax was to be imposed; (2) that the resolution imposing the tax was illegal.

MUNICIPAL ACT

August 1890, plaintiffs sent a notice to the town municipality of Umreth, intimating their intention to erect a building on their land, and giving a rough sketch plan of the land intended to be built upon. In this notice plaintiffs did not expressly state their intention to build the wall in dispute. On the 28th August 1890, the municipality wrote to the plaintiffs, requiring them to furnish a plan showing the design of the proposed building with its measurements. On the 30th September 1890, the plaintiffs, without furnishing the plan as required, built a wall on their land. Thereupon the municipality gave a notice to the plaintiffs requiring them to pull it down, as it has been built without their permission. The plaintiffs having failed to comply with this notice, the wall was demolished, and its materials were carried away by the municipal servants. Thereupon the plaintiffs sued the municipality to recover damages for the wrongful demolition of the wall. Held that the plaintiffs had contravened the provisions of cl. 1 of s. 33 of Bombay Act VI of 1873, inasmuch as they had built the wall without giving any notice, or (if they did) gave notice without affording the information required by the municipality. The municipality were, therefore, justified in ordering the wall to be demolished. DAVE HARI-SHANKAR v. TOWN MUNICIPALITY OF UMRETH

granted—Omission

4. Building beyond area for which permission is granted—Omission to give notice of building—Power of municipality to order alteration or demolition of a building erected without notice or in excess of the permission.—Under the Bombay District Municipal Act, where an owner, having obtained permission under s. 33 to build on one portion of his land, builds on another portion without having obtained fresh permission, if such part of his building as is outside the limits for which permission has been granted is built without notice, the municipality can in their discretion order it to be demolished. BHAWANTSHANKAR v. SURAT CITY MUNICIPALITY. I. L. R., 21 Bom., 187.

5. — and s. 42—Discretion of Court's power to interfere with such discretion.—A suit for an injunction to restrain a municipality from removing a certain building or construction is not an action "for anything done, or purporting to have been done, in pursuance of the Act" within the meaning of s. 48 of Bombay Act II of 1884. Such a suit can, therefore, be brought without giving previous notice to the municipality. Apart from the provisions of s. 33 of Bombay Act VI of 1873, it is only if the site of a building is vested in a municipality under s. 17 of that this body is empowered, whether by s. 42 or by any other section, to take steps for the removal of the building. The discretion of taking action or otherwise under the 3rd clause of s. 33 is vested in the municipality, which alone can determine whether or not the removal of a building erected contrary to the provisions of s. 33 is or is not a measure likely to promote the public convenience. If the municipality adopt the proper procedure, no Court can review its

s. 36—Privy, power of municipality to order to be built by owner of a house—Such order not imperative, but permissive—Discretion of Court.—The terms of s. 36 of Bombay Act VI of 1873 are not imperative in requiring a municipality to call on the owner of a house to build a privy, but are permissive, leaving it to the discretion of the municipality to determine when the power conferred on them shall be exercised. Accordingly, where the plaintiff complained that the defendants had erected

s. 48—Re-erection of a structure formerly existing not within the section.—S. 48 of the Bombay District Municipal Act, 1873, refers to the erection of a thing for the first time, and not to the re-erection of an old structure which had been taken down for a temporary purpose only. The accused was the owner of a shop in a public street at Thana. The shop had planks attached to it in front, overhanging a public gutter. These planks had been in existence before the District Municipal Act came into operation at Thana. In April 1897, the planks were temporarily removed under the orders of the plague authorities. The plague having ceased, the accused replaced the planks in October 1897 without the permission of the municipality. For this he was prosecuted and fined under s. 48 of Bombay Act VI of 1873. Held, reversing the conviction and sentence, that the refixing of the planks was not an "erection" within the meaning of s. 48 of the Act. KALA GOVIND v. and sentenced each of the accused to pay a fine of Rs. 5. The District Magistrate, relying on the case of In re Pada Khoy, I. L. was meant to affect the private rights of persons to use their shops for selling their own commodities, that would amount to an excess of the authority conferred by the District Municipal Act (Bombay) VI of 1873; that the shop used by the accused for the sale of their own commodities was not a "market" within the meaning of s. 66 of Bombay Act VI of 1873. *Mayor of London v. s. 73—Power of the municipality to suppress caste-feasts on the outbreak of cholera—Meaning of the words "take such measures as may be deemed necessary"—Penal Code, s. 193—Construction of statutes.—The City of Ahmedabad being threatened with an outbreak of cholera, the president of the local municipality, acting under s. 73 of Bombay Act VI of 1873, issued an order, in the form of a proclamation, prohibiting the holding of caste-feasts when over thirty persons were to assemble. After the promulgation of this order, the accused gave a feast in a private house to upwards of thirty people of his caste. He was thereupon convicted, under s. 193 of the Penal Code, for disobedience of an order duly promulgated by a public servant, and sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 35. Held (reversing the conviction and sentence) that s. 73 of the Bombay District Municipal Act (VI of 1873) did not empower the municipality to place an interdict on people meeting together to eat and drink in their own houses. The words in the section, "take such measures as may be deemed necessary to prevent, meet, or suppress the outbreak," imply in themselves something actively to be done by the municipality, rather than any limitation to be imposed on the private rights of the citizens in their relations of daily life. Special measures for the health of the town—such as sulphur fumigation, daily flushing of sewers, insistence on good house sanitation, isolation of infected districts, and other similar steps to be taken by the authorities themselves—fall naturally within the meaning of the terms of the section. The Court ought not to strain an Act in favour of an interference with private rights which is not justified by the primary sense of the language. QUEEN-EMPEROR v. HARILAL
